A DICTIONARY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

K. A letter borrowed by the English from the Greek alphabet. It has before all the vowels one invariable sound: as, keen, ken, kill. It is used after c at the end of words as, knock, clack, crack, back, brick, stick, pluck, check, which were written anciently with e final: as, clocke, checke, tricke. It is also in use between a vowel and the silent e final: as, cloke, broke, brake, pike, duke, cke. It likewise ends a word after a diphthong as, look, break, shook, leek The English never use c at the end of a word K is silent in the present pronunciation before n. as, knife, knee, knell.

KA'LENDAR. n. s. [now written calendar.] An account of time.

Let this pernicious hour
Stand as accursed in the kalender Shakesp Mach

KA'LI n s [an Arabick word] Seaweed, of the ashes of which glass was made, whence the word alkali.

The ashes of the weed kali are sold to the Venetians for their glass works Bacon

KAM. adj. Crooked. Kam, in Erse, is squint eyed, and applied to any thing awry clean kam signifies crooked, athwart, awry, cross from the purpose A-schembo, Ital. hence our English a-kimbo. Clean kam is, by vulgar pronunciation, brought to kim, kam.

This is clean kam, merely awry Shakesp

To KAW. v. n. [from the sound.] To cry as a raven, crow, or rook.

Jack-daws kawing and fluttering about the nests, set all their young ones a-gaping but having nothing in their mouths but air, leave them as hungry as before. Locke.

KAW. n. s. [from the verb] The cry of a raven or crow.

The dastard crow that to the wood made wing,
With her loud kaws her craven kind doth bring,
Who, safe in numbers, cuff the noble bird Dryd

KAYLE. n s. [quille, Fr.]

1. Ninepin; kettlepins, of which skittles seems a corruption.

And now at keels they try a harmless chance,
And now their cur they teach to fetch and dance Sidney

The residue of the time they wear out at coits, kayles, or the like idle exercises Carew

2. A kind of play still retained in Scotland, in which nine holes ranged in three's are made in the ground, and an iron bullet rolled in among them.

To KECK. v. n. [kecken, Dut] To heave the stomach; to reach at vomiting.

All those diets do dry up humours and rheums, which they first attenuate, and while the humour is attenuated it troubleth the body a great deal more, and therefore patients must not keck at them at the first Bacon's Nat. Hist

The faction, is it not notorious?
Keck at the memory of glorious. Swift

To KE'CKLE v. a. To defend a cable round with rope. Ainsworth

KNACK. n. s. [cnapunge skill, Sax.]

1. A little machine; a pretty contrivance; a toy.
When I was young, I was wont
To load my she with knacks I would have ransack'd
The pedlar's silken treasury, and have pour'd it
To her acceptance. Shakesp Winter's Tale.
For this, fair knave,
I'll may ever know thou dost but sigh
That thou no more shalt see this knack, as never
I mean thou shalt, we'll bar thee from succession Shak
This cap was moulded on a porringer,
A velvet dish; fie, fie, 'tis lewd and filthy:
Why 'tis a cockle, or a walnut-shell,
A knack, a toy, a trick, a baby's cap. Shakesp
But is't not presumption to write verse to you,
Who make the better poems of the two?
For all these pretty knacks that you compose,
Alas! what are they but poems in prose? Denham.
He expounded both his pockets,
And found a watch, with rings and lockets;
A copper-plate, with almanacks
Engrav'd upon't with other knacks. Hudibras.
2. A readiness; an habitual facility; a lucky dexterity.
I'll teach you the knacks
Of eating flax,
And out of their noses
Draw ribbands and posies. Ben Jonson's Gypsies.
The knack of fast and loose passes with foolish people for a turn of wit, but they are not aware all this while of the desperate consequences of an ill habit. L'Estrange.

Slow'r yet in the word hereafter, the kneading, the sinking of the cakes, and the heating of the oven. Bishop.
It is a lump, where all kinds are kneaded in;
Wisdom makes him an ark, and folly an ape. Donne.
Thus kneaded up with milk and new-made man
His kingdom o'er his kindred world began:
'Till knowledge misapply'd, misunderstood,
And pride of empire, sour'd his balmy blood.
Dryden.
One paste of flesh on all degrees bestow'd,
And kneaded up alike with moist'ning blood. Dryd.
Prometheus, in the kneading up of the heart, seasoned it up with some furious particles of the lion. Addison's Spectator
No man ever reapt his corn,
Or from the oven drew his bread,
Ere hinds and bakers yet were born,
That taught them both to sow and knead. Prior
The cake she kneaded was the sav'ry meat.
Prior

To LASH. v a [from the noun]

1. To strike with any thing pliant; to scourge.
Let's whip these stragglers o'er the seas again,
Lash hence these over-weening rags of France Shakesp
He charg'd the flames, and those that disobey'd
He lash'd to duty with his sword of light Dryden
And limping death, lash'd on by fate,
Comes up to shorten half our date. Dryden
Storms as tutors, and as uncles hard,
We lash the pupil, and defraud the ward Dryden.
Leaning on his lance, he mounts his car,
His fiery courses lashing through the air Garth
2. To move with a sudden spring or jerk.
The club hung round his ears, and batter'd brows,
He falls, and lashing up his heels, his rider throws Dryden
3 To beat; to strike with a sharp sound
The winds grow high,
Impending tempests charge the sky,
The lightning flies, the thunder roars,
And big waves lash the frighted shores Prior.
4 To scourge with satire.
Could pension'd Boileau lash in honest strain,
Flatterers and bigots ev'n in Louis' reign Pope
5 To tie any thing down to the side or mast of a ship properly to lace.

Wheels clash with wheels, and bar the narrow street,
The lashing whip resounds Gay's Trivia

LA'SHER. n s. [from lash] One that whips or lashes

LASS. n s [from lad is formed laddess, by contraction lass. Hickes.] A girl, a maid; a young woman used now only of mean girls
Now was the time for vig'rous lads to show
What love or honour could invite them to,
A goodly theatre, where rocks are round
With reverend age, and lovely lasses crown'd Waller
A girl was worth forty of our widows, and an honest, downright, plain dealing lass it was L'Estrange.
They sometimes an hasty kiss
Steal from unwary lasses, they with scorn
And neck reclin'd, resent Philips.

LA'SSITUDE. n. s. [lassitudo, Lat. lassitude, Fr.]

1 Weariness; fatigue; the pain arising from hard labour.

Lassitude is remedied by bathing, or anointing with oil and warm water, for all lassitude is a kind of contusion and compression of the parts; and bathing and anointing give a relaxation or emollition Bacon's Nat Hist.

Assiduity in cogitation is more than our embodied souls can bear without lassitude or distemper Glanville's Scepsis

She lives and breeds in air, the largeness and lightness of her wings and tail sustain her without lassitude More's Antidote against Atheism.

Do not over-fatigue the spirits, lest the mind be seized with a lassitude, and thereby be tempted to nauseate, and grow tired Watts

From mouth and nose the brimy torrent ran,
And lost in lassitude lay all the man Pope's Ody

2. [In physick.]

Lassitude generally expresses that weariness which proceeds from a distempered state, and not from exercise, which wants no remedy but rest it proceeds from an increase of bulk, from a diminution of proper evacuation, or from too great a consumption of the fluid necessary to maintain the spring of the solids, as in fevers, or from a vitiated secretion of that juice, whereby the fibres are not supplied Quincy

LA'SSLORN. n s. [lass and lorn.] Forsaken by his mistress. Not used.

Brown groves,
Whose shadow the dismissed batchelor loves,

The lowing herds wind slowly o'er the lea. Gray

LEAD. n. s. [læd, Sax]

1. Lead is the heaviest metal except gold and quicksilver. Lead is the softest of all the metals, and very ductile, though less so than gold: it is very little subject to rust, and the least sonorous of all the metals except gold. The specifick gravity of lead is to that of water as 11,322 to 1000. Lead, when kept in fusion over a common fire, throws up all other bodies, except gold, that are mixed, all others being lighter, except mercury, which will not bear that degree of heat. it afterwards vitrifies with the baser metals, and carries them off, in form of scoriæ, to the sides of the vessel. The weakest acids are the best solvents for lead. it dissolves very readily in aqua fortis diluted with water, as also in vinegar. The smoke of lead works is a prodigious annoyance, and subjects both the workmen, and the cattle that graze about them, to a mortal disease. Hill

Thou art a soul in bliss, but I am bound
Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do scald like molten lead Shakesp

Of lead, some I can shew you so like steel, and so unlike common lead ore, that the workmen call it steel ore Boyle

The commons wrested even the power of chusing a king intirely out of the hands of the nobles, which was so great a leap, and caused such a convulsion in the state, that the constitution could not bear Swift

4. An assault of an animal of prey

The cat made a leap at the mouse L'Estrange

5. Embrace of animals.

How she cheats her bellowing lover's eye,
The rushing leap, the doubtful progeny Dryden

6. Hazard, or effect of leaping

Methinks, it were an easy leap
To pluck bright honour from the pale-fac'd moon Shakesp

You take a precipice for no leap of danger,
And woo your own destruction Shakesp

Behold that dreadful downfal of a rock,
Where yon old fisher views the waves from high!
'Tis the convenient leap I mean to try Dryd

LEAP-FROG n s [leap and frog] A play of children, in which they imitate the jump of frogs.

If I could win a lady at leap-frog, I should quickly leap into a wife Shakesp Hen V

LEAP-YEAR n s.

Leap-year or bissextile is every fourth year, and so called from its leaping a day more that year than in a common year so that the common year has 365 days, but the leap-year 366, and then February hath 29 days, which in common years hath but 28 To find the leap-year you have this rule Divide by 4, what's left shall be
For leap-year 0 for past 1, 2, 3 Harris

The reason of the name of leap-year is, that a day of the week is missed, as, if on one year the first of March be on Monday, it will on the next year be on Tuesday, but on leap-year it will leap to Wednesday

That the sun consisteth of 365 days and almost six hours, wanting eleven minutes, which six hours omitted will, in process of time, largely deprave the compute, and this is the occasion of the bissextile or leap-year Brown

To LEARN. v a [leornian, Sax.]

1. To gain the knowledge or skill of.

Learn a parable of the fig-tree Matt xxiv 32

He, in a shorter time than was thought possible, learned both to speak and write the Arabian tongue Knolles

Learn, wretches! learn the motions of the mind,
And the great moral end of humankind Dryden.

You may rely upon my tender care,
To keep him far from perils of ambition
All he can learn of me, will be to weep! A. Philips

2. To teach. [It is observable, that in many of the European languages the same word signifies to learn and to teach; to gain or impart knowledge.] This sense is now obsolete.

He would learn
The lion stoop to him in lowly wise,
A lesson hard Spenser's Fairy Queen.

You taught me language, and my profit on't
Is, I know not how to curse the red plague rid you,
For learning me your language Shakesp Tempest

A thousand more mischances than this one,
Have learn'd me how to brook this patiently Shakesp

Hast thou not learn'd me how
To make perfumes? Shakesp Cymbeline

To LEARN. v n. To take pattern: with of.

Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly Matt xi 29

In imitation of sounds, that man should be the teacher is no part of the matter, for birds will learn one of another Bacon's Nat. Hist.

LE'ARNED adj [from learn]

1. Versed in science and literature.

It is indifferent to the matter in hand, which way the learned shall determine of it. Locke

Some by old words to fame have made pretence
Such labour'd nothings, in so strange a style,
Amaze th' unlearn'd, and make the learned smile. Pope

The learned met with free approach,
Although they came not in a coach Swift

The best account is given of them by their own authors but I trust more to the table of the learned bishop of Bath Arbuthnot on Coins

2. Skilled, skilful; knowing: with in.

Though train'd in arms, and learn'd in martial arts,
Thou chusest not to conquer men but hearts Granv

3. Skilled in scholastick, as distinct from other knowledge

Till a man can judge whether they be truths or no, his understanding is but little improved and thus men of much reading are greatly learned, but may be little knowing Locke

LE'ARNEDLY. adv [from learned.] With knowledge, with skill

The apostle seemed in his eyes but learnedly mad Hooker

Much
He spoke, and learnedly, for life, but all
Was either pitied in him, or forgotten Shakesp

Every coxcomb swears as learnedly as they Swift

LE'ARNING n s. [from learn.]

1 Literature, skill in languages or sciences, generally scholastick knowledge

Learning hath its infancy, when it is almost childish, then its youth, when luxuriant and juvenile, then its strength of years, when solid, and, lastly, its old age, when dry and exhaust Bacon

To tongue or pudding thou hast no pretence,
Learning thy talent is, but mine is sense Prior

As Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, so it is manifest from this chapter, that St. Paul was a great master in all the learning of the Greeks Bentley

2 Skill in any thing good or bad.

An art of contradiction by way of scorn, a learning wherewith we were long athence forewarned, that the miserable times whereunto we are fallen should abound Hooker

LE'ARNER. n. s [from learn.] One who is yet in his rudiments; one who is acquiring some new art or knowledge.

The late learners cannot so well take the ply, except it be in some minds that have not suffered themselves to fix. Bacon.

Nor can a learner work so cheap as a skilful practised artist can. Graunt's Bills of Mortality.

LEASE. n. s. [laisser, Fr. Spelman.]

1. A contract by which, in consideration of some payment, a temporary possession is granted of houses or lands.

Why, cousin, wert thou regent of the world,
It were a shame to let this land by lease Shakesp

Lords of the world have but for life their lease,
And that too, if the lessor please, must cease
Denham.

I have heard a man talk with contempt of bishops leases, as on a worse foot than the rest of his estate Swift.

2. Any tenure.

Our high-plac'd Macbeth
Shall live the lease of nature Shakesp

Thou to give the world increase,
Short ned hast thy own life's lease Milton.

To* LEASE. v. n. [from the noun.] To let by lease.

Where the vicar leases his glebe, the tenant must pay the great tythes to the rector or impropriator, and the small tithes to the vicar Ayliffe

To* LEASE. v. n. [lesen, Dut.] To glean, to gather what the harvest men leave.

She in harvest us'd to lease,
But harvest done, to chare-work did aspire,
Meat, drink, and two-pence, was her daily hire
Dryden.

LEA'SER. n. s. [from lease.] Gleaner, gatherer after the reaper.

There was no office which a man from England might not have, and I looked upon all who were born here as only in the condition of leasers and gleaners. Swift

LEASH. n s. [lesse, Fr. letse, Dut. laccio, Ital.]

1 A leather thong, by which a falconer holds his hawk, or a courser leads his greyhound. Hanmer

Holding Corioli in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash,
To let him slip at will Shakesp

What I was, I am,
More straining on, for plucking back, not following
My leash unwillingly. Shak Winter's Tale

2 A tierce; three

I am sworn brother to a leash of drawers, and can call them all by their Christian names Shak

Some thought when he did gabble,
Th'ad heard three labourers of Babel,
Or Cerberus himself pronounce
A leash of languages at once Hudibras

Thou art a living comedy, they are a leash of dull devils Dennis's Letters

3. A band wherewith to tie any thing in general.

The ravished soul being shewn such game, would break those leashes that tie her to the body Boyle

To* LEASH v a [from the noun.] To bind, to hold in a string

Then should the warlike Harry, like himself,
Assume the port of Mars, and, at his heels,
Leasht in like hounds, should famine, sword and fire,
Crouch for employment Shakesp Henry V

LE'ASING. n. s. [leasre, Sax] Lies; falsehood.

O ye sons of men, how long will ye have such pleasure in vanity, and seek after leasing? Psalms iv 2

He 'mongst ladies would their fortunes read
Out of their hands, and merry leasings tell Hubberd's Tale.

He hates foul leasings and vile flattery,
Two filthy blots in noble geutery. Hubberd's Tale

That false pilgrim which that leasing told,
Was indeed old Archimago. Fairy Queen.

I have ever verified my friends
With all the size that verity
Would without lapsing suffer nay, sometimes,
Like to a bowl upon a subtle ground
I've tumbled past the throw, and in his praise
Have almost stampt the leasing. Shakesp.

As folks, quoth Richard, prone to leasing,
Say things at first, because they're pleasing,
Then prove what they have once asserted,
Nor care to have their lie deserted:
Till their own dreams at length deceive them,
And oft repeating they believe them. Prior.

Trading free shall thrive again,
Nor leasings lewd affright the swain. Gay.

LEAST. adj. the superlative of little. [læ̆ſt, Sax. This word Wallis would persuade us to write lest, that it may be analogous to less; but surely the profit is not worth the change.] Little beyond others; smallest

I am not worthy of the least of all the mercies shewed to thy servant Gen xxxii 10

A man can no more have a positive idea of the greatest than he has of the least space. Locke

LEAST adv. In the lowest degree; in a degree below others, less than any other way

He resolv'd to wave his suit,
Or for a while play least in sight Hudibras.

Ev'n that avert, I chuse it not,
But taste it as the least unhappy lot Dryden

No man more truly knows to place a right value on your friendship, than he who least deserves it on all other accounts than his due sense of it. Pope

At* LEAST. At the* LEAST. At* LEASTWISE. To say no more; not to demand or affirm more than is barely sufficient; at the lowest degree.

He who tempts, though in vain, at least asperses
The tempted with dishonour Milton

He from my side subducting, took perhaps
More than enough, at least on her bestowed
Too much of ornament, in outward show
Elaborate, of inward less exact Milton

Upon the mast they saw a young man, at least if he were a man, who sat as on horseback Sidney

Every effect doth after a sort contain, at leastwise resemble, the cause from which it proceedeth Hooker

Honour and fame at least the thund'rer ow'd,
And ill he pays the promise of a god. Pope

The remedies, if any, are to be proposed from a constant course of the milken diet, continued at least a year Temple

A friend may deceive a creature of more excellency than himself, at least by the tacit permission of the omniscient Being Dryden

2. It has a sense implying doubt; to say no more, to say the least, not to say all that might be said

Whether such virtue spent now fail'd
New angels to create, if they at least
Are his created Milton

Let useful observations be at least some part of the subject of your conversation Watts

LEA'SY. adj. [This word seems formed from the same root with loisir, Fr. or loose] Flimsy, of weak texture. Not in use.

He never leaveth, while the sense itself be left loose and leasy Ascham's Schoolmaster

LEA'THER. n. s. [le̊ðep, Sax leadr, Erse.]

I'll mingle with the people's wretched lee Prior

2 [Sea term; supposed by Skinner from Leau, Fr.] It is generally that side which is opposite to the wind, as the lee shore is that the wind blows on. To be under the lee of the shore, is to be close under the weather shore. A leeward ship is one that is not fast by a wind, to make her way so good as she might. To lay a ship by the lee, is to bring her so that all her sails may lie against the masts and shrowds flat, and the wind to come right on her broadside, so that she will make little or no way. Dict.

If we, in the bay of Biscay, had had a port under our lee, that we might have kept our transporting ships with our men of war, we had taken the Indian fleet Raleigh.

The Hollanders were before Dunkirk with the wind at north west, making a lee shore in all weathers Raleigh

Unprovided of tackling and victualling, they are forced to sea by a storm, yet better do so than venture splitting and sinking on a lee shore King Charles.

Him, haply slumb'ring on the Norway foam,
The pilot of some small night-founder'd skiff,
Deeming some island, oft, as seamen tell,
With fixed anchor in his scaly rind,
Moors by his side under the lee, while night
Invests the sea. Milton.

Batter'd by his lee they lay,
The passing winds through their torn canvass play
Dryden.

LEECH. n. s. [læc, Sax.]
1. A physician; a professor of the art of healing: whence we still use cow-leech.

A leech, the which had great insight
In that disease of grieved conscience,
And well could cure the same, his name was Patience. Spenser's Fairy Queen.

Her words prevail'd, and then the learned leech
His cunning hand 'gan to his wounds to lay,
And all things else the which his art did teach.
Fairy Queen.

Physick is their bane,
The learned leeches in despair depart,
And shake their heads, desponding of their art.
Dryden.

Wise leeches will not vain receipts obtrude
Deaf to complaints they wait upon the ill,
Till some safe crisis Dryden.

The hoary wrinkled leech has watch'd and toil'd,
Tried every health-restoring herb and gum,
And wearied out his painful skill in vain Rowe.

A skilful leach,
They say, had wrought this blessed deed,
This leach Arbuthnot was yclept Gay's Pastorals

2. A kind of small water serpent, which fastens on animals, and sucks the blood. It is used to draw blood where the lancet is less safe, whence perhaps the name.

I drew blood by leeches behind his ear Wiseman.

Sticking like leeches, till they burst with blood,
Without remorse insatiably Roscommon

To LEECH. v a. [from the noun.] To treat with medicaments.

LE'ECHCRAFT. n. s [leech and craft.] The art of healing.

We study speech, but others we persuade
We leechcraft learn, but others cure with it Davies

LEEF. adj [leve, leve, Dut] Kind, fond.

Whilome all these were low and leef,
And lov'd their flocks to feed,
They never strove to be the chief,
And simple was their weed Spenser's Pastorals.

LEEK. n. s. [leac, Sax. loock, Dut. lerchk, Erse; porrum, Lat.] A plant.

Know'st thou Fluellen?—Yes
—Tell him I'll knock his leek about his pate,
Upon St David's day Shakesp

Leek to the Welsh, to Dutchmen butter's dear Gay

We use acrid plants inwardly and outwardly in gangrenes, in the scurvy, water-cresses, horse-radish, garlick, or leek pottage Floyer on Humours.

LEER n. s. [pleape, Sax.]
1. An oblique view.

I spy entertainment in her, she gives the leer of invitation Shakesp Merry Wives of Windsor

Aside the devil turn'd
For envy, yet with jealous leer malign
Ey'd them askance Milton.

2. A laboured cast of countenance.

Damn with faint praise, concede with civil leer.
Pope

I place a statesman full before my sight,
A bloated minister in all his geer,
With shameless visage, and perfidious leer Swift

To LEER. v. n. [from the noun.]
1. To look obliquely; to look archly.

I will leer upon him as he comes by, and do but mark the countenance that he will give me Shakesp

I wonder whether you taste the pleasure of independency, or whether you do not sometimes leer upon the court. Swift.

2. To look with a forced countenance.

Bertran has been taught the arts of courts,
To gild a face with smiles, and leer a man to ruin
Dryden.

LEES. n. s. [lie, Fr.] Dregs; sediment: it has seldom a singular.

The memory of king Richard was so strong, that it lay like lees at the bottom of men's hearts; and if the vessel was but stirred, it would come up. Bacon's Henry VII

If they love lees, and leave the lusty wine,
Envy them not their palates with the swine.
Ben Jonson.

Those lees that trouble it, refine
The agitated soul of generous wine. Dryden.

To LEESE. v a. [lesen, Dut] To lose: an old word.

Then sell to thy profit both butter and cheese,
Who buieth it sooner the more he shall leese. Tusa.

No cause, nor client fat, will Chev'ril leese,
But as they come on both sides he takes fees;
And pleaseth both for while he melts his grease
For this, that wins for whom he holds his peace
Ben Jonson.

How in the port our fleet dear time did leese,
Withering like prisoners, which lie but for fees.
Donne

LEET. n. s.

Leete, or leta, is otherwise called a law-day. The word seemeth to have grown from the Saxon lese, which was a court of jurisdiction above the wapentake or hundred, comprehending three or four of them, otherwise called thrashing, and contained the third part of a province or shire these jurisdictions, one and other, be now abolished, and swallowed up in the county court Cowell.

Who has a breast so pure,
But some uncleanly apprehensions
Keep leets and law-days, and in sessions sit
With meditations lawful? Shakesp Othello.

You would present her at the leet,

LE'EWARD. adj [lee and peapb, Sax.] Towards the wind. See LEE.

The classicæ were called long ships, the onerariæ round, because of their figure approaching towards circular this figure, though proper for the stowage of goods, was not the fittest for sailing, because of the great quantity of leeward way, except when they sailed full before the wind Arbuthnot.

Let no statesman dare
A kingdom to a ship compare,
Lest he should call our commonweal
A vessel with a double keel,
Which just like ours, new rigg'd and man'd,
And got about a league from land,
By change of wind to leeward side,
The pilot knew not how to guide Swift.

I weep myself to think upon thy words Shakesp

Had such a river as this been left to itself, to have found its way out from among the Alps, whatever windings it had made, it must have formed several little seas Addison.

Were I left to myself, I would rather aim at instructing than diverting, but if we will be useful to the world, we must take it as we find it.
Addison's Spectator.

That there is also in men a natural prepotency in the right, we cannot with constancy affirm, if we make observation in children, who, permitted the freedom of both hands, do oftentimes confine it unto the left, and are not without great difficulty restrained from it. Brown's Vulgar Errours.

The right to Pluto's golden palace guides,
The left to that unhappy region tends,
Which to the depth of Tartarus descends Dryden.

The gods of greater nations dwell around,
The commons where they can Dryden.

A raven from a wither'd oak,
Left of their lodging was oblig'd to croak:
That omen lik'd him not. Dryden.

The left foot naked when they march to fight,
But in a bull's raw hide they sheathe the right.
Dryden.

The man who struggles in the fight,

For the seat of the heart and liver on one side, whereby men become left handed, it happeneth too rarely to countenance an effect so common for the seat of the liver on the left side is very monstrous. Brown's Vulg. Err

B' ungracious, yet we cannot want that hand
Donne

LEG. n. s. [leg, Dan. *legg*ur, Islandick.]

1. The limb by which we walk; particularly that part between the knee and the foot.

They haste, and what their hardy feet deny'd,
The trusty staff, their better leg, supply'd Dryd.

Purging comfits, and ants eggs,
Had almost brought him off his legs. Hudibras.

Such intrigues people cannot meet with, who have nothing but legs to carry them Addison.

2. An act of obeisance; a bow with the leg drawn back.

At court, he that cannot make a leg, put off his cap, kiss his hand, and say nothing, has neither leg, hands, lip, nor cap Shakesp

Their horses never give a blow,
But when they make a leg, and bow Hudibras

If the boy should not put off his hat, nor make legs very gracefully, a dancing-master will cure that defect Locke

He made his leg, and went away. Swift

3. To stand on his own legs. To support himself.

Persons of their fortune and quality could well have stood upon their own legs, and needed not to lay in for countenance and support Collier

4. That by which any thing is supported on the ground. as, the leg of a table.

LEGACY. n. s. [legatum, Lat.]

Legacy is a particular thing given by last will and Testament Cowell

If there be no such thing apparent upon record, they do as if one should demand a legacy by force and virtue of some written testament, wherein there being no such thing specified, he pleadeth that there it must needs be, and bringeth arguments from the love or good will which always the testator bore him, imagining, that these, or the like proofs, will convict a testament to have that in it, which other men can nowhere by reading find Hooker

Fetch the will hither, and we shall determine
How to cut off some charge in legacies. Shakesp

Good counsel is the best legacy a father can leave a child L'Estrange

When he thought you gone
T' augment the number of the bless'd above,
He deem'd 'em legacies of royal love,
Nor arm'd, his brothers portions to invade,
But to defend the present you had made Dryden

When the heir of this vast treasure knew
How large a legacy was left to you,
He wisely ty'd it to the crown again. Dryden.

Leave to thy children tumult, strife, and war,
Portions of toil, and legacies of care Prior

LE'GAL. adj. [legal, Fr. leges, Lat.]

It is in our power to secure to ourselves an interest in the divine mercies that are yet to come, and to lengthen the course of our present prosperity Atterbury's Sermons

3 To protract pronunciation

The learned languages were less constrained in the quantity of every syllable, beside helps of grammatical figures for the lengthening or abbreviation of them Dryden

4. To lengthen out. [The particle out is only emphatical.] To protract, to extend.

What if I please to lengthen out his date
A day, and take a pride to cozen fate? Dryden.

I'd hoard up every moment of my life
To lengthen out the payment of my tears Dryden

It lengthens out every act of worship, and produces more lasting and permanent impressions in the mind, than those which accompany any transient form of words Addison

To LE'NGTHEN v n. To grow longer, to increase in length

One may as well make a yard, whose parts lengthen and shrink, as a measure of trade in materials, that have not always a settled value Locke

Still tis farther from its end,
Still finds its error lengthen with its way Prior

LE'NGTHWISE. adv [length and wise] According to the length, in a longitudinal direction.

LE'NIENT. adj. [leniens, Lat]

The objection lessens much, and comes to no more than this, there was one witness of no good reputation. Atterbury.

LE'SSER. adj. A barbarous corruption of less, formed by the vulgar from the habit of terminating comparatives in er; afterwards adopted by poets, and then by writers of prose, till it has all the authority which a mode originally erroneous can derive from custom.

What great despite doth fortune to thee bear,
Thus lowly to abase thy beauty bright,
That it should not deface all other lesser light?
Fairy Queen.

It is the lesser blot, modesty finds,
Women to change their shapes than men their minds. Shakesp.

The mountains, and higher parts of the earth, grow lesser and lesser from age to age sometimes the roots of them are weakened by subterraneous fires, and sometimes tumbled by earthquakes into caverns that are under them. Burnet

Cain, after the murder of his brother, cries out, Every man that findeth me shall slay me. By the same reason may a man, in the state of nature, punish the lesser breaches of that law. Locke.

Any heat promotes the ascent of mineral matter, but more especially of that which is subtile, and is consequently moveable more easily, and with a lesser power Woodward

LICE'NTIATE n. s. [licentiatus, low Lat.]

1. A man who uses license. Not in use.

The licentiates somewhat licentiously, lest they should prejudice poetical liberty, will pardon themselves for doubling or rejecting a letter, if the sense fall aptly Camden

2. A degree in Spanish universities.

A man might, after that time, sue for the degree of licentiate or master in this faculty Ayliffe

To LICE'NTIATE. v. a. [licentier, Fr.] To permit; to encourage by license.

We may not hazard either the stifling of generous inclinations, or the licentiating of any thing that is coarse L'Estrange

LICE'NTIOUS. adj. [licencieux, Fr. licentiosus, Lat.]

1. Unrestrained by law or morality.

Later ages pride, like corn-fed steed,
Abus'd her plenty, and fat swoln encrease,
To all licentious lust, and 'gan exceed
The measure of her mean, and natural first need. Fairy Queen

How would it touch thee to the quick,
Should'st thou but hear I were licentious?
And that this body, consecrate to thee,
With ruffian lust should be contaminate? Shak

2. Presumptuous; unconfined.

The Tyber, whose licentious waves,
So often overflow'd the neighbouring fields,
Now runs a smooth and moderate course Rose

LICE'NTIOUSLY adv [from licentious] With too much liberty, without just restraint.

The licentiates, somewhat licentiously, will pardon themselves Camden's Remains

LICE'NTIOUSNESS. n. s. [from licentious] Boundless liberty; contempt of just restraint.

One error is so fruitful, as it begetteth a thousand children, if the licentiousness thereof be not timely restrained Raleigh

This custom has been always looked upon, by the wisest men, as an effect of licentiousness, and not of liberty Swift

During the greatest licentiousness of the press, the character of the queen was insulted. Swift

LICH. n. s. [lice, Sax.] A dead carcase, whence lichwake, the time or act of watching by the dead, lichgate, the gate through which the dead are carried to the grave, Lichfield, the field of the dead, a city in Staffordshire, so named from martyred christians. Salve magna parens. Lichwake is still retained in Scotland in the same sense.

To LICK. v. a. [lecan, Sax. lecken, Dut.]

1. To pass over with the tongue.

Æsculapius went about with a dog and a she-goat, both which he used much in his cures; the first for licking all ulcerated wounds, and the goat's milk for the diseases of the stomach and lungs. Temple.

A bear's a savage beast,
Whelp'd without form, until the dam
Has lick'd it into shape and frame. Hudibras.

He with his tepid rays the rose renews,
And licks the drooping leaves, and dries the dews. Dryden.

I have seen an antiquary lick an old coin, among other trials, to distinguish the age of it by its taste. Addison.

2. To lap; to take in by the tongue.

At once pluck out
The multitudinous tongue, let them not lick
The sweet which is their poison. Shakesp.

3. To lick up. To devour.

Now shall this company lick up all that are round about us, as the ox licketh up the grass Numbers.

When luxury has lick'd up all thy pelf,
Curs'd by thy neighbours, thy trustees, thyself
Think how posterity will treat thy name. Pope

LICK. n. s. [from the verb] A blow; rough usage. A low word.

He turned upon me as round as a chafed boar, and gave me a lick across the face. Dryden

LI'CKERISH. } adj. [liccepa, a glutton, Saxon. This seems to be the proper way of spelling the word, which has no affinity with liquor, but with like.]
LI'CKEROUS. }

1 Nice in the choice of food.

Voluptuous men sacrifice all substantial satisfactions to a liquorish palate L'Estrange.

2. Eager; greedy to swallow; eager not with hunger but gust.

It is never tongue-tied, where fit commendation, whereof womankind is so lickerish, is offered unto it Sidney

Strephon, fond boy, delighted, did not know
That it was love that shin'd in shining maid;
But lick'rous, poison'd, fain to her would go. Sidney

Certain rare manuscripts, sought in the most remote parts by Erpenius, the most excellent linguist, had been left to his widow, and were upon sale to the Jesuits, liquorish chapmen of all such ware Wotton.

In vain he proffer'd all his goods to save
His body, destin'd to that living grave,
The liquorish hag rejects the pelf with scorn,
And nothing but the man would serve her turn Dryden.

In some provinces they were so liquorish after man's flesh, that they would suck the blood as it run from the dying man. Locke

3. Nice, delicate, tempting the appetite. This sense I doubt.

Would'st thou seek again to trap me here
With lickerish baits, fit to ensnare a brute? Milton.

LI'CORICE. n. s. [γλυκύρριζα; liquoricia, Ital.] A root of sweet taste.

Liquorice root is long and slender, externally of a dusky reddish brown, but within of a fine yellow, full of juice, and of a taste sweeter than sugar, it grows wild in many parts of France, Italy, Spain, and Germany. The inspissated juice of this root is brought to us from Spain and Holland, from the first of which places it obtained the name of Spanish juice Hill's Mat. Med

LICTOR. n. s. [Lat.] A beadle that attended the consuls to apprehend or punish criminals.

Saucy lictors
Will catch at us like strumpets. Shakesp

Proconsuls to their provinces
Hasting, or on return, in robes of state,
Lictors and rods the ensigns of their power. Milt.

Democritus could feed his spleen, and shake
His sides and shoulders till he felt 'em ake;
Though in his country-town no lictors were,
Nor rods, nor ax, nor tribune. Dryden's Juvenal.

LID. n. s. [plib, Sax. lied, Germ.]

1. A cover; any thing that shuts down over a vessel; any stopple that covers the mouth, but not enters it.

Hope, instead of flying off with the rest, stuck so close to the lid of the cup, that it was shut down upon her. Addison.

2. The membrane that, when we sleep or wink, is drawn over the eye.

Do not for ever with thy veiled lids,
Seek for thy noble father in the dust, Shakesp.

Our eyes have lids, our ears still ope we keep. Davies.

That eye dropp'd sense distinct and clear,
As any muse's tongue could speak,
When from its lid a pearly tear
Ran trickling down her beauteous cheek. Prior.

The rod of Hermes
To sleep could mortal eye-lids fix,
And drive departed souls to Styx
That rod was just a type of Sid's,
Which o'er a British senate's lids
Could scatter opium full as well,
And drive as many souls to hell Swift.

LIE. n. s [lie, Fr.] Any thing impregnated with some other body, as, soap or salt.

Chamber-lie breeds fleas like a loach Shakesp.

Thou liest, abhorred tyrant! with my sword
I'll prove the lie thou speak'st Shakesp Macbeth

A lye is properly an outward signification of something contrary to, or at least beside, the inward sense of the mind, so that when one thing is signified or expressed, and the same thing not meant or intended, that is properly a lye South.

Truth is the object of our understanding, as good is of our will, and the understanding can no more be delighted with a lye, than the will can choose an apparent evil Dryden.

When I hear my neighbour speak that which is not true, and I say to him, This is not true, or this is false, I only convey to him the naked idea of his error, this is the primary idea, but if I say it is a lie, the word lie carries also a secondary idea, for it implies both the falsehood of the speech, and my reproach and censure of the speaker Watts's Logick.

2. A charge of falsehood; to give the lie, is a formulary phrase.

That lye shall lye so heavy on my sword,
That it shall render vengeance and revenge,
Till thou the lie giver, and that lie, rest
In earth as quiet as thy father's skull Shakesp

It is a contradiction to suppose, that whole nations of men should unanimously give the lie to what, by the most invincible evidence, every one of them knew to be true. Locke

Men will give their own experience the lie, rather than admit of any thing disagreeing with these tenets. Locke

3. A fiction. This sense is ludicrous.

The cock and fox, the fool and knave imply,
The truth is moral, though the tale a lie Dryden.

Oh! had the monster seen those lily hands
Tremble, like aspen leaves, upon a lute,
And make the silken strings delight to kiss them,
He would not then have touch'd them for his life!
Shakesp
Shipwreck'd upon a kingdom, where no pity!
No friends! no hope! no kindred weep for me!
Almost no grave allow'd me! Like the lily,
That once was mistress of the field, and flourish'd,
I'll hang my head, and perish Shakesp.

Arnus, a river of Italy, is drawn like an old man, oy his right side a lion, holding forth in his right paw a red lily, or flower-de-luce
Peacham on Drawing

Take but the humblest lily of the field,
And if our pride will to our reason yield,
It must by sure comparison be shown,
That on the regal seat great David's son,
Array'd in all his robes, and types of pow'r,
Shines with less glory than that simple flow'r.
Prior

For her the lilies hang their heads, and die
Pope

And with these raptures moves the vocal air
To testify his hidden residence Milton.

And dwells such rage in softest bosoms then?
And lodge such daring souls in little men? Pope.

2. To take a temporary habitation.

Why commands the king,
That his chief followers lodge in towns about him,
While he himself keepeth in the cold field?
Shakesp

I know not where he lodges, and for me to devise a lodging, and say, he lies here or he lies there, were to lie in mine own throat Shakesp

Thy father is a man of war, and will not lodge with the people Samuel

3. To take up residence at night.

My lords
And soldiers, stay and lodge by me this night
Shakesp

Oh, that I had in the wilderness a lodging place of wayfaring men, that I might leave my people! Jeremiah

Here thou art but a stranger travelling to thy country, it is therefore a huge folly to be afflicted, because thou hast a less convenient inn to lodge in by the way Taylor.

4. To lay flat.

Long cone wheat they reckon in Oxfordshire best for rank clays, and its straw makes it not subject to lodge, or to be mildewed
Mortimer's Husbandry.

LODGE n. s. [logis, Fr.]

A meat offering mingled with oil, and one log of oil Lev

LO'GARITHMS. n. s. [logarithme, Fr. λόγος and ἀριθμος]

Logarithms, which are the indexes of the ratios of numbers one to another, were first invented by Napier lord Merchiston, a Scottish baron, and afterwards completed by Mr Briggs, Savilian professor at Oxford They are a series of artificial numbers contrived for the expedition of calculation, and proceeding in an arithmetical proportion, as the numbers they answer to do in a geometrical one, for instance,

0	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
1	2	4	8	16	32	64	128	256	512

Where the numbers above, beginning with (0), and arithmetically proportional, are called logarithms The addition and subtraction of logarithms answers to the multiplication and division of the numbers they correspond with, and this saves an infinite deal of trouble In like manner will the extraction of roots be performed, by dissecting the logarithms of any numbers for the square root, and trisecting them for the cube, and so on Harris

LO'GGATS. n. s.

Loggats is the ancient name of a play or game, which is one of the unlawful games enumerated in the thirty-third statute of Henry VIII. It is the same which is now called kittle-pins, in which boys often make use of bones instead of wooden pins, throwing at them with another bone instead of bowling Hanmer

Did these bones cost no more the breeding, but to play at loggats with them? Shakesp Hamlet

LO'GGERHEAD. n. s. [logge, Dut. stupid, and head, or rather from log, a heavy motionless mass, as blockhead.] A dolt; a blockhead; a thickscull.

Where hast been, Hal?
—With three or four loggerheads, amongst three or fourscore hogsheads Shakesp Henry IV.

Says this loggerhead, what have we to do to quench other people's fires? L'Estrange.

To fall to LOGGERHEADS. } To scuffle;
To go to LOGGERHEADS. } to fight without weapons.

A couple of travellers that took up an ass, fell to loggerheads which should be his master L'Estrange.

LO'GICK. n. s. [logique, Fr. logica, Lat. from λόγος.] The art of reasoning. One of the seven sciences.

Logick is the art of using reason well in our enquiries after truth, and the communication of it to others. Watts's Logick.

Talk logick with acquaintance,
And practise rhetorick in your common talk.
Shakesp.

By a logick that left no man any thing which he might call his own, they no more looked upon it as the case of one man, but the case of the kingdom Clarendon.

Here foam'd rebellious logick, gagg'd and bound,
There stript fair rhetorick languish'd on the ground.
Pope.

LO'GICAL. adj. [from logick]

1. Pertaining to logick; taught in logick.

The heretick complained greatly of St Augustine, as being too full of logical subtilties Hooker

Those who in a logical dispute keep in general terms, would hide a fallacy. Dryden.

We ought not to value ourselves upon our ability, in giving subtile rules, and finding out logical arguments, since it would be more perfection not to want them Baker.

2. Skilled in logick; furnished with logick.

A man who sets up for a judge in criticism, should have a clear and logical head Addison

LO'GICALLY. adv. [from logical.] According to the laws of logick.

How can her old good man
With honour take her back again?
From hence I logically gather,
The woman cannot live with either. Prior

LO'GICIAN. n. s. [logicien, Fr. logicus, Lat.] A teacher or professor of logick; a man versed in logick.

If a man can play the true logician, and have as well judgment as invention, he may do great matters Bacon.

If we may believe our logicians, man is distinguished from all other creatures by the faculty of laughter. Addison.

Each staunch polemick stubborn as a rock,
Each fierce logician still expelling Locke,
Came whip and spur Pope's Dunciad

A logician might put a case that would serve for an exception Swift

The Arabian physicians were subtle men, and most of them logicians, accordingly they have given method, and shed subtilty upon their author Baker

LOIN. n. s. [llwyn, Welsh.]

1. The back of an animal carved out by the butcher.

2. Loins; the reins.

My face I'll grime with filth,
Blanket my loins Shakesp. King Lear.

Thou slander of thy heavy mother's womb!
Thou loathed issue of thy father's loins! Shak.

Virgin mother, hail!
High in the love of Heav'n! yet from my loins
Thou shalt proceed, and from thy womb the Son
Of God most high Milton's Parad. Lost.

A multitude! like which the populous north
Pour'd never from her frozen loins, to pass
Rhene, or the Danaw, when her barbarous sons
Came like a deluge on the south Milton.

To LOITER. v. n. [loteren, Dut.] To linger; to spend time carelessly; to idle.

Sir John, you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in the countries. Shakesp.

Whence this long delay?
You loiter, while the spoils are thrown away
Dryden

Mark how he spends his time, whether he unactively loiters it away Locke

If we have gone wrong, let us redeem the mistake, if we have loitered, let us quicken our pace, and make the most of the present opportunity Rogers

LO'ITERER. n. s. [from loiter.] A lingerer; an idler; a lazy wretch; one who lives without business; one who is sluggish and dilatory.

Give gloves to thy reapers a largess to cry,
And daily to loiterers have a good eye
Tusser's Husbandry

The poor, by idleness or unthriftiness, are riotous spenders, vagabonds, and loiterers Hayward

Where hast thou been, thou loiterer?
Though my eyes clos'd, my arms have still been open'd,
To search if thou wert come Otway

Providence would only enter mankind into the useful knowledge of her treasures, leaving the rest to employ our industry, that we live not like idle loiterers and truants More

Ever listless loit'rers, that attend
No cause, no trust, no duty, and no friend. Pope

To LOLL. v. n. [Of this word the etymology is not known. Perhaps it might be contemptuously derived from lollard, a name of great reproach before the reformation; of whom one tenet was, that all trades not necessary to life are unlawful.]

1. To lean idly; to rest lazily against any thing.

So hangs, and lolls, and weeps upon me, so shakes and pulls me Shakesp. Othello

Trevoux* derives lourdant from Lorde or Lourde, a village in Gascoigny, the inhabitants of which were formerly noted robbers, say they. But dexterity in robbing implies some degree of subtilty, from which the Gascoigns are so far removed, that they are awkward and heavy to a proverb. The Erse imports some degree of knavery, but in a ludicrous sense, as, in English, you pretty rogue; though in general it denotes reproachful heaviness, or stupid laziness.—Spenser's Scholiast says, loord was wont, among the old Britons, to signify a lord; and therefore the Danes that usurped their tyranny here in Britain, were called, for more dread than dignity, lurdant, i. e. lord Danes, whose insolence and pride was so outrageous in this realm, that if it fortuned a Briton to be going over a bridge, and saw the Dane set foot upon the same, he must return back till the Dane was clean over, else he must abide no less than present death: but being afterwards expelled, the name of lurdane became so odious unto the people whom they had long oppressed, that, even at this day, they use for more reproach to call the quartan ague the fever lurdane. So far the Scholiast, but erroneously. From Spenser's own words, it signifies something of stupid dulness rather than magisterial arrogance Macbean.] A drone.
Siker, thou's but a lazy loord,
And rekes much of thy swinke,
Th with fond terms and witless words
To bleer mine eyes do'st think. Spenser's Pastorals.

From the sore although the insect flies,
It leaves a brood of maggots in disguise. Garth

2. Whimsey, caprice; odd fancy. A low word

Inflata phrases, silken terms precise,
Three pil'd hyperboles, spruce affectation,
Figures pedantical, these summer flies
Have blown me full of maggot ostentation
I do forswear them
Henceforth my wooing mind shall be expresst
In russet yeas, and honest kersy noes Shakesp
To reconcile our late dissenters,
Our brethren though by other venters,
Unite them and their different maggots,
As long and short sticks are in faggots Hudibras

She pricked his maggot, and touched him in the tender point, then he broke out into a violent passion Arbuthnot.

MA'GGOTTINESS n. s. [from maggotty.] The state of abounding with maggots.

MAGGOTY adj. [from maggot.]

1. Full of maggots

2. Capricious; whimsical. A low word.

MA'GICK. n. s. [magia, Lat.]

1. The art of putting in action the power of spirits: it was supposed that both good and bad spirits were subject to magick; yet magick was in general held unlawful. sorcery; enchantment.

She once being looft,
The noble ruin of her magick, Antony,
Claps on his sea-wing Shakesp. Ant. and Cleop.

What charm, what magick, can over-rule the force of all these motives? Rogers

2. The secret operations of natural powers

The writers of natural magick attribute much to the virtues that come from the parts of living creatures, as if they did infuse immaterial virtue into the part severed Bacon.

MA'GICK. adj.

1. Acting or doing by powers superior to the known power of nature; enchanted, necromantick.

Upon the corner of the moon
There hangs a vap'rous drop profound,
I'll catch it ere it come to ground
And that distill'd by magick slights
Shall raise such artificial sprights,
As by the strength of their illusion,
Shall draw him on to his confusion Shakesp.

Like castles built by magick art in air,
That vanish at approach, such thoughts appear Granville.

2. Done or produced by magick.

And the brute earth would lend her nerves, and shake,

Is not more loath'd than an effeminate man Shak

When mannish Mevia, that two-handed whore,
Astride on horseback hunts the Tuscan boar Dry

MA'NOR. n. s. [manoir, old Fr. manerium, low Lat maner, Armorick.]

Manor signifies, in common law, a rule or government which a man hath over such as hold land within his fee. Touching the original of those manors, it seems, that, in the beginning, there was a certain compass of ground granted by the king to some man of worth, for him and his heirs to dwell upon, and to exercise some jurisdiction, more or less, within that compass, as he thought good to grant, performing him such services, and paying such yearly rent for the same, as he by his grant required and that afterward this great man parcelled his land to other meaner men, injoining them again such services and rents as he thought good, and by that means, as he became tenant to the king, so the inferiors became tenants to him but those great men, or their posterity, have alienated these mansions and lands so given them by their prince, and many for capital offences have forfeited them to the king, and thereby they still remain in the crown, or are bestowed again upon others But whosoever possesses these manors, the liberty belonging to them is real and predial, and therefore remains, though the owners be changed In these days, a manor rather signifies the jurisdiction and royalty incorporeal, than the land or site for a man may have a manor in gross, as the law terms it, that is, the right and interest of a court-baron, with the perquisites thereto belonging Cowell.

My parks, my walks, my manors that I had,
Ev'n now forsake me, and of all my lands
Is nothing left me Shakesp. Henry VI

Kinsmen of mine,
By this so sicken'd their estates, that never

MA'RCASITE. n. s.

The term marcasite has been very improperly used by some for bismuth, and by others for zink the more accurate writers however always express a substance different from either of these by it, sulphurous and metallick. The marcasite is a solid hard fossil, naturally found among the veins of ores, or in the fissures of stone the variety of forms this mineral puts on is almost endless There are however only three distinct species of it, one of a bright gold colour, another of a bright silver, and a third of a dead white the silvery one seems to be peculiarly meant by the writers on the Materia Medica. Marcasite is very frequent in the mines of Cornwall, where the workmen call it mundick, but more in Germany, where they extract vitriol and sulphur from it. Hill

The writers of minerals give the name pyrites and marcasites indifferently to the same sort of body I restrain the name of pyrites wholly to the nodules, or those that are found lodged in strata that are separate the marcasite is part of the matter that either constitutes the stratum, or is lodged in the perpendicular fissures Woodward.

The acid salt dissolved in water is the same with oil of sulphur per campanam, and abounding much in the bowels of the earth, and particularly in marcasites, unites itself to the other ingredients of the marcasite, which are bitumen, iron, copper, and earth, and with them compounds alum, vitriol, and sulphur; with the earth alone it compounds alum, with the metal alone, and metal and earth together, it compounds vitriol, and with the bitumen and earth it compounds sulphur whence it comes to pass, that marcasites abound with those three minerals. Newton's Opt.

Here marcasites in various figures wait,
To ripen to a true metallick state. Garth's Dispens

Nearer heav'n his virtues shone more bright,
Like rising flames expanding in their height,
The martyr's glory crown'd the soldier's light.
Dryden.

To be a martyr signifies only to witness the truth of Christ, but the witnessing of the truth was then so generally attended with persecution, that martyrdom now signifies not only to witness, but to witness by death South's Sermons.

The first martyr for Christianity was encouraged, in his last moments, by a vision of that divine person for whom he suffered Addison.

Socrates,
Truth's early champion, martyr for his God Thom.

To MA'RTYR. v a. [from the noun.]

1. To put to death for virtue, or true profession.

2. To murder; to destroy.

You could not beg for grace
Hark, wretches, how I mean to martyr you
This one hand yet is left to cut your throats Shak

If to every common funeral,
By your eyes martyr'd, such grace were allow'd,
Your face would wear not patches, but a cloud.
Suckling

Martyr'd with the gout Pope

MA'RTYRDOM n. s [from martyr.] The death of a martyr; the honour of a martyr, testimony born to truth by voluntary submission to death.

If an infidel should pursue to death an heretick professing Christianity only for Christian profession sake, could we deny unto him the honour of martyrdom? Hooker

Now that he hath left no higher degree of earthly honour, he intends to crown their innocency with the glory of martyrdom Bacon.

Herod, whose unblest
Hand, O! what dares not jealous greatness? tore
A thousand sweet babes from their mother's breast,
The blooms of martyrdom Crashaw

Wars, hitherto the only argument
Heroick deem'd, chief mast'ry to dissect,
With long and tedious havock, fabled knights
In battles feign'd, the better fortitude
Of patience and heroick martyrdom
Unsung. Milton.

What mists of providence are these?
So saints, by supernatural pow'r set free,

MARTYRO'LOGY. n s. [martyrologe, Fr. martyrologium, Lat] A register of martyrs.

In the Roman martyrology we find at one time many thousand martyrs destroyed by Diocletian, being met together in a church, rather than escape by offering a little incense at their coming out. Stillingfleet.

The name of servants has been reckoned to imply a certain meanness of mind, as well as lowness of condition. South.

4. Sordidness; niggardliness

MEANT. perf and part. pass. of To mean.

By Silvia if thy charming self be meant,
If friendship be thy virgin vows extent
O! let me in Ammta's praises join,
Her's my esteem shall be, my passion thine. Prior

MEASE. n. s. [probably a corruption of measure as, a mease of herrings is five hundred.] Ainsworth.

MEASLES. n. s. [morbilli, Lat.]

1. Measles are a critical eruption in a fever, well known in the common practice. Quincy.

My lungs
Coin words till their decay, against those measles,
Which we disdain should tetter us, yet seek
The very way to catch them Shakesp Coriolanus

Before the plague of London, inflammations of the lungs were rife and mortal, as likewise the measles Arbuthnot

2 A disease of swine.

One, when he had an unlucky old grange, would needs sell it, and proclaimed the virtues of it, nothing ever thrived on it, no owner of it ever died in his bed, the swine died of the measles, and the sheep of the rot Ben Jonson's Discovery

3. A disease of trees

Fruit-bearers are often infected with the measles, by being scorched with the sun Mortimer's Husb

MEASLED. adj [from measles] Infected with the measles.

Thou vermin wretched,
As e'er in measled pork was hatched,
Thou tail of worship, that dost grow
On rump of justice as of cow Hudibras

MEASLY. adj. [from measles.] Scabbed with the measles.

Last trotted forth the gentle swine,
To ease her against the stump,
And dismally was heard to whine,
All as she scrubb'd her measly rump Swift

MEASURABLE adj. [from measure.]

1. Such as may be measured, such as may admit of computation.

God's eternal duration is permanent and invisible, not measurable by time and motion, nor to be computed by number of successive moments Bentley's Sermons.

2 Moderate; in small quantity.

MEASURABLENESS. n. s [from measurable.] Quality of admitting to be measured

MEASURABLY. adv. [from measurable.] Moderately.

Wine measurably drunk, and in season, bringeth gladness of the heart. Eccles. xxxi 28.

MEASURE. n s. [mesure, Fr. mensura, Lat.]

1. That by which any thing is measured.

A taylor's news,
Who stood with shears and measure in his hand,
Standing on slippers, which his nimble haste
Had falsely thrust upon contrary feet,
Told of many a thousand Shakesp King John

A concave measure, of known and denominated capacity, serves to measure the capaciousness of any other vessel Holder

All magnitudes are capable of being measured, but it is the application of one to another which makes actual measure Hobbes

When Moses speaks of measures, for example, of an ephah, he presumes they knew what measure he meant that he himself was skilled in weights and measures, arithmetick and geometry, there is no reason to doubt Arbuthnot on Coins

2 The rule by which any thing is adjusted or proportioned.

He lived according to nature, the other by ill customs, and measures taken by other mens eyes and tongues Taylor

God's goodness is the measure of his providence More

I expect, from those that judge by first sight and rash measures, to be thought fond or insolent. Granville's Sceptic

3. Proportion; quantity settled.

Measure is that which perfecteth all things, because every thing is for some end, neither can that thing be available to any end, which is not proportionable thereunto, and to proportion as well excesses as defects are opposite Hooker

I enter not into the particulars of the law of nature, or its measures of punishment, yet there is such a law Locke

4. A stated quantity: as, a measure of wine.

Be large in mirth, anon we'll drink a measure
The table round Shakesp Macbeth

5. Sufficient quantity.

I'll never pause again,
Till either death hath clos'd these eyes of mine,
Or fortune given me measure of revenge Shakesp

6. Allotment, portion allotted.

Good Kent, how shall I live and work
To match thy goodness? life will be too short,
And every measure fail me Shakesp King Lear

We will not boast of things without our measure, but according to the measure of the rule which God hath distributed to us, a measure to reach even unto you 2 Cor x 13

If else thou seek'st
Ought, not surpassing human measure, say Milt

Our religion sets before us not the example of a stupid stock, who had, by obstinate principles, hardened himself against all pain beyond the common measures of humanity, but an example of a man like ourselves Tillotson

7. Degree, quantity.

I have laid down, in some measure, the description of the old world Abbot's Descrip of the World

There is a great measure of discretion to be used in the performance of confession, so that you neither omit it when your own heart may tell you that there is something amiss, nor over scrupulously pursue it when you are not conscious to yourself of notable failings Taylor

The rains were but preparatory in some measure, and the violence and consummation of the deluge depended upon the disruption of the great abyss Burnet's Theory

8. Proportionate time; musical time.

Amaryllis breathes thy secret pains,
And thy fond heart beats measure to thy strains Prior

9. Motion harmonically regulated.

My legs can keep no measure in delight,
When my poor heart no measure keeps in grief
Therefore no dancing, girl, some other sport Shak

As when the stars in their æthereal race,
At length have roll'd around the liquid space,
From the same point of heav'n their course advance,
And move in measures of their former dance. Dryd

10. A stately dance. This sense is, I believe, obsolete.

Wooing, wedding, and repenting, is as a Scotch jig, a measure, and a cinque pace, the first suit is hot and hasty, like a Scotch jig, and full as fantastical, the wedding mannerly, modest as a measure, full of state and ancientry Shakesp

Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths,
Our stern alarms chang'd to merry meetings,
Our dreadful marches to delightful measures Shak

11. Moderation, not excess

O love, be moderate, allay thy ecstasy,
In measure rein thy joy, scant this excess,
I feel too much thy blessing, make it less,
For fear I surfeit Shakesp Merchant of Venice

Hell hath enlarged herself, and opened her mouth without measure. Isa v 14.

12. Limit, boundary. In the same sense is

Μέτρον

Τριῶν ἐτῶν δικάδας τριάδας δύο, μέτρον ἔδωκαν
Ἡμιλίρης Βιοῦς μάντις ἀθέριος.
Ἀρκεῖμαι τέ τοισιν

Lord, make me to know mine end, and the measure of my days what it is, that I may know how frail I am. Psalms.

13. Any thing adjusted.

Christ reveals to us the measures according to which God will proceed in dispensing his rewards. Smalridge's Sermons.

14. Syllables metrically numbered, metre.

I addressed them to a lady, and affected the softness of expression, and the smoothness of measure, rather than the height of thought. Dryden.

The numbers themselves, though of the heroick measure, should be the smoothest imaginable. Pope

15. Tune, proportionate notes.

The joyous nymphs and light-foot fairies,
Which thither came to hear their musick sweet,
And to the measures of their melodies
Did learn to move their nimble-shifting feet Spens.

16 Mean of action; mean to an end. The original of this phrase refers to the necessity of measuring the ground upon which any structure is to be raised, or any distant effect to be produced, as in shooting at a mark. Hence he that proportioned his means to his end was said to take right measures. By degrees measures and means were confounded, and any thing done for an end, and sometimes any transaction absolutely, is called a measure, with no more propriety than if, because an archer might be said to have taken wrong measures when his mark was beyond his reach, we should say that it was a bad measure to use a heavy arrow.

His majesty found what wrong measures he had taken in the conferring that trust, and lamented his error Clarendon

17. To have hard measure, to be hardly treated.

To MEASURE. v. a [mesurer, Fr. mensuro, Lat.]

1. To compute the quantity of any thing by some settled rule.

Archidamus having received from Philip, after the victory of Cheronea, proud letters, writ back, that if he measured his own shadow he would find it no longer than it was before his victory Bacon

2. To pass through, to judge of extent by marching over.

A true devoted pilgrim is not weary
To measure kingdoms with his feeble steps Shak.

I'll tell thee all my whole device
At the park-gate, and therefore haste away,
For we must measure twenty miles to-day Shakesp

The vessel ploughs the sea,
And measures back with speed her former way Dry

3. To judge of quantity or extent, or greatness

Great are thy works, Jehovah! infinite
Thy pow'r! What thought can measure thee, or tongue
Relate thee? Milton's Paradise Lost

4 To adjust, to proportion

To secure a contented spirit, measure your desires by your fortunes, not your fortunes by your desires Taylor

Silver is the instrument as well as measure of commerce, and 'tis by the quantity of silver he gets for any commodity in exchange, that he measures the value of the commodity he sells Locke

5 To mark out in stated quantities.

What thou seest is that portion of eternity which is called time, measured out by the sun, and reaching from the beginning of the world to its consummation Addison's Spectator

6. To allot or distribute by measure

With what measure you mete, it shall be measured to you again Matth vii 2

ME'ASURELESS. adj. [from measure.] Immense; immeasurable.

He shut up in measureless content. Shakesp.

ME'ASUREMENT. n. s. [from measure.] Mensuration; act of measuring.

ME'ASURER. n. s. [from measure.] One that measures.

ME'ASURING. adj. [from measure.] It is applied to a cast not to be distinguished in its length from another but by measuring.

When lusty shepherds throw
The bar by turns, and none the rest out-go
So far, but that the best are meas'ring casts,
Their emulation and their pastime lasts. Waller.

MEAT. n. s. [met, Fr.]

1. Flesh to be eaten.

To his father he sent ten she asses laden with corn, and bread, and meat for his father by the way. Gen. xlv 23.

Carnivora, and birds of prey, are no good meat, but the reason is, rather the cholerick nature of those birds than their feeding upon flesh, for pewets and ducks feed upon flesh, and yet are good meat Bacon's Natural History

There was a multitude of excises, as, the vectigal macelli, a tax upon meat. Arbuthnot.

2. Food in general.

Never words were musick to thine ear,
And never meat sweet-savour'd in thy taste,
Unless I spake or carv'd. Shak Comedy of Errours

Meats for the belly, and the belly for meats, but God shall destroy both 1 Cor vi 13.

ME'ATED. adj. [from meat.] Fed; foddered.

Strong oxen and horses, wel shod and wel clad,
Wel meated and used Tusser's Husbandry

MEATHE. n. s [medd, Welsh, unde mede, meddwi ebrius sum.] Drink, properly of honey.

She crushes, inoffensive must, and meathes
From many a berry Milton's Paradise Lost.

ME'AZLING. part. generally called mizzling.

The air feels more moist when the water is in small than in great drops, in mezzling and soaking rain, than in great showers. Arbuthnot on Air

MECHA'NICAL. } adj. [mechanicus, Lat.
MECHA'NICK. } mechanique, Fr. from μηχανη.]

1. Constructed by the laws of mechanicks.

Many a fair precept in poetry, is like a seeming demonstration in mathematicks, very specious in the diagram, but failing in the mechanick operation Dryden

The main business of natural philosophy, is to argue from phenomena without feigning hypotheses, and to deduce causes from effects till we come to the very first cause, which certainly is not mechanical, and not only to unfold the mechanism of the world, but chiefly to resolve these, and such like questions Newton.

2. Skilled in mechanicks; bred to manual labour.

3 Mean; servile, of mean occupation.

Know you not, being mechanical, you ought not to walk upon a labouring day, without the sign of your profession? Shakesp

Hang him, mechanical salt-butter rogue! I will stare him out of his wits, I will hew him with my cudgel. Shakesp.

Mechanick slaves,
With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers, shall Uplift us to the view. Shakesp Antony and Cleop.

To make a god, a hero, or a king,
Descend to a mechanick dialect. Roscommon.

MECHA'NICK. n. s. A manufacturer; a low workman

Do not bid me
Dismiss my soldiers, or capitulate
Again with Rome's mechanicks Shakesp Coriolanus.

A third proves a very heavy philosopher, who possibly would have made a good mechanick, and have done well enough at the useful philosophy of the spade or the anvil. South.

MECHA'NICKS. n. s. [mechanica, Lat.]

Dr. Wallis defines mechanicks to be the geometry of motion, a mathematical science, which shews the effects of powers, or moving forces, so far as they are applied to engines, and demonstrates the laws of motion. Harris.

The rudiments of geography, with something of mechanicks, may be easily conveyed into the minds of acute young persons Watts's Impr. of the Mind

Salmoneus was a great proficient in mechanicks, and inventor of a vessel which imitated thunder. Broome.

MECHA'NICALLY. adv. [from mechanick] According to the laws of mechanism.

They suppose even the common animals that are in being, to have been formed mechanically among the rest Ray

Later philosophers feign hypotheses for explaining all things mechanically, and refer other causes to metaphysicks Newton.

MECHA'NICALNESS. n. s. [from mechanick.]

1. Agreeableness to the laws of mechanism.
2. Meanness.

MECHANI'CIAN. n. s. [mechanicien, Fr.] A man professing or studying the construction of machines.

Some were figured like male, others like female screws, as mechanicians speak Boyle.

ME'CHANISM. n. s. [mechanisme, Fr.]

1. Action according to mechanick laws.

After the chyle has passed through the lungs, nature continues her usual mechanism, to convert it into animal substances. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

He acknowledged nothing besides matter and motion, so that all must be performed either by mechanism or accident, either of which is wholly unaccountable Bentley

1. Disordered with melancholy; fanciful; hypochondriacal, gloomy.

If he be mad, or angry, or melancholick, or sprightly, he will paint whatsoever is proportionable to any one Dryden

The commentators on old Aristotle, 'tis urg'd, in judgement vary.
They to their own conceits have brought
The image of his general thought
Just as the melancholick eye
Sees fleets and armies in the sky Prior

2. Unhappy; unfortunate, causing sorrow.

The king found himself at the head of his army, after so many accidents and melancholick perplexities Clarendon

MELANCHO'LY. n. s. [melancolie, Fr. from μέλας and χολή.]

1. A disease, supposed to proceed from a redundance of black bile; but it is better known to arise from too heavy and too viscid blood its cure is in evacuation, nervous medicines, and powerful stimuli. Quincy.

2. A kind of madness, in which the mind is always fixed on one object

I have neither the scholar's melancholy, which is emulation, nor the musician's, which is fantastical, nor the courtier's, which is proud, nor the soldier's, which is ambitious, nor the lawyer's, which is politick, nor the lady's which is nice, nor the lover's, which is all these, but it is a melancholy of mine own, compounded of many simples, extracted from many objects, and indeed the sundry contemplation of my travels, in which my often rumination wraps me in a most humorous sadness Shakesp

Moonstruck madness, moping melancholy. Milt

3. A gloomy, pensive, discontented temper.

He protested, that he had only been to seek solitary places by an extreme melancholy that had possessed him Sidney.

All these gifts come from him, and if we murmur here, we may at the next melancholy be troubled that God did not make us angels
Taylor's Holy Living.

This melancholy flatters, but unmans you,
What is it else but penury of soul,
A lazy frost, a numbness of the mind? Dryden

In those deep solitudes and awful cells,
Where heav'nly pensive contemplation dwells
And ever musing melancholy reigns. Pope

MELANCHO'LY. adj. [melancholique, Fr.]
1. Gloomy; dismal.
Think of all our miseries
But as some melancholy dream, which has awak'd us
To the renewing of our joys Denham
If in the melancholy shades below,
The flames of friends and lovers cease to glow;
Yet mine shall sacred last, mine undecay'd,
Burn on through death, and animate my shade
Pope
2. Diseased with melancholy; fanciful; habitually dejected
How now, sweet Frank, art thou melancholy?
Shakesp
He observes Lamech more melancholy than usual, and imagines it to be from a suspicion he has of his wife Adah, whom he loved Locke.

MELLI'FLUENT. } adj. [mel and fluo,
MELLI'FLUOUS. } Lat.] Flowing with honey; flowing with sweetness.
A mellifluous voice, as I am a true knight. Shak
As all those things which are most mellifluous are soonest changed into choler and bitterness, so are our vanities and pleasures converted into the bitterest sorrows Raleigh
Innumerous songsters in the freshening shade
Of new sprung leaves, their modulations mix
Mellifluous. Thomson's Spring

ME'LLOW. adj [meapa soft, Sax. Skinner more nearly from mollis, molle, mollow, mellow: though r is indeed easily changed into l in common speech.]
1. Soft with ripeness; full ripe.
A storm, a robbery, call it what you will,
Shook down my mellow hangings, nay my leaves
Shakesp
An apple in my hand works different effects upon my senses my eye tells me it is green, my nose, that it hath a mellow scent, and my taste, that it is sweet Digby
A little longer,
And Nature drops him down without your sin,
Like mellow fruit, without a winter storm. Dryden.
2. Soft in sound.
Of seven smooth joints a mellow pipe I have,
Which with his dying breath Damœtas gave. Dry

1. To ripen, to mature, to soften by ripeness, to ripen by age.
Lord Aubrey Vere
Was done to death, and more than so, my father,
Even in the downfall of his mellow'd years. Shak
The royal tree hath left us royal fruit,
Which mellow'd by the stealing hours of time,
Will well become the seat of majesty. Shakesp
On foreign mountains may the sun refine
The grapes soft juice, and mellow it to wine Addis
2. To soften
They plow in the wheat stubble in December, and if the weather prove frosty to mellow it, they do not plow it again till April Mortimer's Husb
3. To mature to perfection.
This episode, now the most pleasing entertainment of the Æneis, was so accounted in his own age, and before it was mellowed into that reputation which time has given it. Dryden

To ME'LLOW. v. n. To be matured, to ripen
Though no stone tell thee what I was, yet thou
In my grave's inside see'st, what thou art now,
Yet thou'rt not yet so good, till us death lay
To ripe and mellow there, we're stubborn clay
Donne

ME'LLOWNESS. n. s. [from mellow.]
1. Maturity of fruits; ripeness; softness by maturity.
My reason can consider greenness, mellowness, sweetness, or coldness, singly, and without relation to any other quality that is painted in me by the same apple Digby of Bodies
The spring, like youth, fresh blossoms doth produce,
But Autumn makes them ripe, and fit for use.
So age a mature mellowness doth set
On the green promises of youthful heat. Denham.
2. Maturity; full age.

MELOCO'TON. n. s. [melocotone, Span. malum cotoneum, Lat.] A quince. Obsolete.

They are carried into the glands of the mesentery, receiving a fine lymph from the lymphatick ducts, which dilutes this chylous fluid, and scours its contamine vessels, which, from the mesenterick glands, unite in large channels, and pass directly into the common receptacle of the chyle Cheyne

MESH. n s [maesche, Dut mache, old French: it were therefore better written, as it is commonly pronounced, mash] The interstice of a net, the space between the threads of a net.

The drovers hang square nets athwart the tide, through which the shoal of pilchard passing, leave many behind entangled in the meshes Carew.

Such a lure is madness the youth, to skip over the meshes of good counsel the cripple Shakesp.

He spreads his subtle nets from sight,
With twinkling glasses to betray
The larks that in the meshes light Dryden

With all their mouths the nerves the spirits drink,
Which through the cells of the fine strainers sink
These all the channel'd fibres ev'ry way,
For motion and sensation, still convey
The greatest portion of th' arterial blood,
By the close structure of the parts withstood,
Whose narrow meshes stop the grosser flood Blackmore.

To MESH v. a [from the noun.] To catch in a net; to ensnare

The flies by chance mesht in her hair,
By the bright radiance thrown
From her clear eyes, rich jewels were,

Through which her words so wise do make their way,
To bear the message of her gentle spright Spenser
May one, that is a herald and a prince,
Do a fair message to his kingly ears? Shakesp
She is fair, and, fairer than that word,
Of wond'rous virtues, sometimes from her eyes
I did receive fair speechless messages Shakesp
Gently hast thou told
Thy message, which might else in telling wound,
And in performing end us Milton's Parad. Lost
Let the minister be low, his interest inconsiderable, the world will suffer for his sake, the message will still find reception according to the dignity of the messenger South
The welcome message made, was soon receiv'd,
'Twas to be wish'd and hop'd, but scarce believ'd
Dryden

ME'SSENGER. n. s. [messager, Fr.] One who carries an errand; one who comes from another to a third, one who brings an account or foretoken of any thing, an harbinger; a forerunner.

Came running in, much like a man dismaid,
A messenger with letters, which his message said
Spenser
Yon grey lines,
That fret the clouds, are messengers of day Shak.
The earl dispatched messengers one after another to the king, with an account of what he heard and believed he saw, and yet thought not fit to stay for an answer Clarendon.
Joy touch'd the messenger of heav'n, he stay'd
Entranc'd, and all the blissful haunt survey'd Pope

METHO'UGHT, the preterite of methinks See METHINKS and MESEEMS I thought, it appeared to me. I know not that any author has meseemed, though it is more grammatical, and deduced analogically from meseems.

Methought, a serpent eat my heart away,
And you sat smiling at his cruel prey Shakesp.

Since I sought
By pray'r th' offended deity t' appease,
Kneel'd, and before him humbled all my heart,
Methought, I saw him placable, and mild,
Bending his ear persuasion in me grew
That I was heard with favour, peace return'd
Home to my breast, and to my memory
His promise, "That thy seed shall bruise our foe"
Milton

In these
I found not what, methought, I wanted still Milt
Methought I stood on a wide river's bank,
Which I must needs o'erpass, but knew not how
Dryden

He was quick mettle when he went to school
Shakesp

I had rather go with air priest than air knight
I care not who knows so much of my mettle
Shak. Twelfth Night

Upon this heaviness of the king's forces, interpreted to be fear and want of mettle, divers resorted to the seditious Hayward's Edward VI

He had given so frequent testimony of signal courage in several actions, that his mettle was never suspected Clarendon

'Tis more to guide than spur the muse's steed,
Restrain his fury, than provoke his speed,
The winged courser, like a gen'rous horse,
Shows most true mettle when you check his course
Pope

2 Substance this at least should be metal.

Oh thou! whose self-same mettle,
Whereof thy proud child, arrogant man, is puft,
Engenders the black toad, and adder blue Shak

METTLED. adj [from mettle] Spritely; courageous; full of ardour; full of fire

Such a light and metall'd dance
Saw you never. Ben Jonson

Nor would you find it easy to compose
The mettled steeds, when from their nostrils flows
The scorching fire that in their entrails glows
Addison

METTLESOME. adj [from mettle.] Spritely; lively; gay; brisk, airy; fiery; courageous.

Their force differs from true spirit, as much as a vicious from a mettlesome horse. Tatler.

MEW. n. s. [mue, Fr.]

1. A cage; an inclosure, a place where any thing is confined.

Forth-coming from her darksome mew,
Where she all day did hide her hated hew Spens

There then she does transform to monstrous hues,
And horribly mis-shapes with ugly sights,
Captiv'd eternally in iron mews,
And darksome dens, where Titan his face never shews. Spenser

Her lofty hand would of itself refuse
To touch the dainty needle or nice thread,
She hated chambers, closets, secret mews,
And in broad fields preserv'd her maidenhead
Fairfax

The steps of wrong, then move you to mew up
Your tender kinsman Shakesp King John.

Fair Hermia, question your desires,
Know of your youth, examine well your blood,
Whether if you yield not to your father's choice,
You can endure the livery of a nun,
For aye to be in shady cloister mew'd,
To live a barren sister all your life,
Chanting faint hymns to the cold, fruitless moon
Shakesp

More pity that the eagle should be mew'd,
While kites and buzzards prey at liberty Shakesp

Feign them sick,
Close mew'd in their sedans, for fear of air

MI'DMOST adj [from mid, or contracted from middlemost: this is one of the words which have not a comparative, though they seem to have a superlative degree] The middle.

Now van to van the foremost squadrons meet,
The midmost battles hasting up behind Dryden
Hear himself repine
At fate's unequal laws, and at the clue,
Which, merciless in length, the midmost sister drew Dryden
What dulness dropt among her sons imprest,
Like motion, from one circle to the rest
So from the midmost the mutation spreads
Round, and more round o'er all the sea of heads
Pope

MI'DNIGHT n s [mid and night. Milton seems to have accented this last syllable] The noon of night; the depth of night, twelve at night.

The execution of justice is committed to his judges which is the severer part, but the milder part, which is mercy, is wholly left in the king Bacon's Advice to Villiers
If that mild and gentle God thou be,
Who dost mankind below with pity see Dryden
It teaches us to adore him as a mild and merciful being, of infinite love to his creatures Rogers

2. Soft; gentle, not violent.
The rosy morn resigns her light,
And milder glory to the noon Waller
Nothing reserv'd or sullen was to see,
But sweet regards, and pleasing sanctity,
Mild was his accent, and his actions free Dryden.
Sylvia's like autumn ripe, yet mild as May,
More bright than noon, yet fresh as early day Pope
The folding gates diffus'd a silver light,
And with a milder gleam refresh'd the sight. Addis

3. Not acrid; not corrosive; not acrimonious, demulcent; assuasive; mollifying, lenitive.
Their qualities are changed by rendering them acrimonious or mild Arbuthnot on Aliments

4. Not sharp, mellow, sweet, having no mixture of acidity.
The Irish were transplanted from the woods and mountains into the plains, that, like fruit trees, they might grow the milder, and bear the better and sweeter fruit. Davies
Suppose your eyes sent equal rays
Upon two distant pots of ale,
Not knowing which was mild or stale Prior

MI'LDEW n s. [milbenpe, Sax]
Mildew is a disease of plants, caused by a dewy moisture which falls on them, and continuing, for want of the sun's heat, to draw it up, by its acrimony corrodes, gnaws, and spoils the plant: or mildew is rather a concrete substance, which exsudes through the pores of the leaves What the gardeners commonly call mildew is an insect, found in great plenty, preying upon this exsudation Others say, that mildew is a thick, clammy vapour, exhaled in the Spring and Summer from the plants, blossoms, and even the earth itself, in close, still weather, where there is neither sun nor wind Miller thinks the true cause of the mildew appearing most upon plants which are exposed to the East, is a dry temperature in the air when the wind blows from that point, which stops the pores of the plants, and prevents their perspiration, whereby the juices of the plants are concreted upon the surface of their leaves, which being of a sweetish nature, insects are inticed thereto Hill.
Down fell the mildew of his sugar'd words. Fairfax
The mildew cometh by closeness of air, and therefore in hills, or champaign grounds, it seldom cometh Bacon
Soon blasting mildews blacken all the grain Dryden

To MI'LDEW v. a. To taint with mildew.
Here is your husband, like a mildew'd ear,
Blasting his wholesome brother Shakesp Hamlet
He mildews the white wheat, and hurts the poor creatures of the earth Shakesp K Lear
Morals snatch from Plutarch's tatter'd page,
A mildew'd Bacon, or Stagyra's sage. Gay's Trivia

MI'LDLY. adv. [from mild]
1. Tenderly; not severely
Prince, too mildly reigning,
Cease thy sorrow and complaining Dryden.

2. Gently; not violently
The air once heated maketh the flame burn more mildly, and so helpeth the continuance Bacon's Nat History

MI'LDNESS. n. s [from mild]
1. Gentleness, tenderness; mercy; clemency.
This milky gentleness and course of yours,
You are much more at task for want of wisdom,
Than prais'd for harmful mildness Shakesp
The same majestic mildness hold its place,
Nor lost the monarch in his dying face Dryden
I saw with what a brow you brav'd your fate
Yet wish what mildness bore your father's hate Dryden
His probity and mildness shows,
His care of friends and scorn of foes Addison

2 Contrariety to acrimony.

MILE. n s. [mille passus, Lat] The usual measure of roads in England, one thousand seven hundred and sixty yards, or five thousand two hundred and eighty feet.
We must measure twenty miles to-day. Shakesp
Within this three mile may you see it coming,
A moving grove Shak Macbeth
When the enemy appeared, the foot and artillery were four miles behind Clarendon

MI'LITANT. adj. [militans, Lat. militante, Fr.]

1. Fighting; prosecuting the business of a soldier.

Against foul fiends they aid us militant,
They for us fight, they watch and duly ward,
And their bright squadrons round about us plant Spenser.

2. Engaged in warfare with hell and the world. A term applied to the church of Christ on earth, as opposed to the church triumphant.

Then are the publick duties of religion best ordered, when the militant church doth resemble, by sensible means, that hidden dignity and glory wherewith the church triumphant in Heaven is beautified Hooker

The state of a Christian in this world is frequently compared to a warfare and this allusion has appeared so just, that the character of militant has obtained, as the common distinction of that part of Christ's church sojourning here in this world, from that part of the family at rest. Rogers.

MI'LITAR. } adj. [militaris, Lat. mili-
MI'LITARY. } taire, Fr. Militar is now wholly out of use.]

Than prais'd for harmful mildness. Shakesp

MI'LKY-WAY. n. s. [milky and way.] The galaxy.

The milky-way, or via lactea, is a broad white path or track, encompassing the whole heavens, and extending itself in some places with a double path, but for the most part with a single one Some of the ancients, as Aristotle, imagined that this path consisted only of a certain exhalation hanging in the air, but, by the telescopical observations of this age, it hath been discovered to consist of an innumerable quantity of fixed stars, different in situation and magnitude, from the confused mixture of whose light its whole colour is supposed to be occasioned Harris.

Nor need we with a prying eye survey
The distant skies to find the milky-way
It forcibly intrudes upon our sight. Creech

How many stars there must be, a naked eye may give us some faint glimpse, but much more a good telescope, directed towards that region of the sky called the milky-way. Cheyne.

MILL. n. s. [μυλη; mola, Lat. melin, Welsh; mylen, Sax. moulin, Fr. molen, Dut.] An engine or fabrick in which corn is ground to meal, or any other body is comminuted. Justice requireth nothing mincingly, but all with pressed and heaped, and even over enlarged measure Hooker

MIND. n. s [ȝemind, Sax]

1. The intelligent power.
I am a very foolish, fond old man,
I fear I am not in my perfect mind Shakesp
This word being often used for the soul giving life, is attributed abusively to madmen, when we say that they are of a distracted mind, instead of a broken understanding: which word, mind, we use also for opinion, as, I am of this or that mind and sometimes for men's conditions or virtues, as, he is of an honest mind, or a man of a just mind sometimes for affection, as, I do this for my mind's sake: sometimes for the knowledge of principles, which we have without discourse: oftentimes for spirits, angels, and intelligences: but as it is used in the proper signification, including both the understanding agent and passible, it is described to be a pure, simple, substantial act, not depending upon matter, but having relation to that which is intelligible, as to its first object, or more at large thus, a part or particle of the soul, whereby it doth understand, not depending upon matter, nor needing any organ, free from passion coming from without, and apt to be discovered as eternal from that which is mortal Raleigh
I thought th' eternal Mind
Had made us masters Dryden

2 Intellectual capacity
We say that learning's endless, and blame fate
For not allowing life a longer date,
He did the utmost bounds of knowledge find,
He found them not so large as was his mind Cowley

3. Liking, choice, inclination; propension, affection.
Our question is, Whether all be sin which is done without direction by scripture, and not whether the Israelites did at any time amiss, by following their own minds, without asking counsel of God? Hooker
We will consider of your suit,
And come some other time to know our mind Shakesp
Being so hard to me that brought your mind,
I fear she'll prove as hard to you in telling her mind Shakesp
I will have nothing else but only this,
And now methinks I have a mind to it Shakesp
Be of the same mind one towards another Rom xii 16
Hast thou a wife after thy mind? forsake her not Eccles
They had a mind to French Britain, but they have let fall their bit Bacon's War with Spain
Sudden a mind arose
In Adam, not to let th' occasion pass,
Given him by this great conference to know
Of things above this world Milton's Par Lost
Waller coasted on the other side of the river, but at such a distance that he had no mind to be engaged Clarendon
He had a great mind to do it Clarendon

Th' ambiguous god,
In these mysterious words, his mind exprest,
Some truths reveal'd, in terms involv'd the rest Dryden

5. Opinion
The earth was not of my mind,
If you suppose as fearing you, it shook Shakesp
These men are of the mind, that they have clearer ideas of infinite duration than of infinite space, because God has existed from all eternity, but there is no real matter coextended with infinite space Locke
The gods permitting traitors to succeed,
Become not partners in an impious deed,
And, by the tyrant's murder, we may find,
That Cato and the gods were of a mind. Granville.

6 Memory; remembrance.
The king knows their disposition, a small touch will put him in mind of them Bacon
When he brings
Over the earth a cloud, will thereon set
His triple-coloured bow, whereon to look,
And call to mind his covenant Milton's Par Lost
These and more than I to mind can bring,
Menalcus has not yet forgot to sing Dryden
The cavern's mouth alone was hard to find,
Because the path disus'd was out of mind Dryden
They will put him in mind of his own waking thoughts, ere these dreams had as yet made their impressions on his fancy Atterbury's Sermons
A wholesome law time out of mind,
Had been confirm'd by fate's decree Swift

Their merry musick that resounds from far,
The pipe, the tabor, and the trembling croud,
That well agree withouten breach or jar Spenser.

I will give you the minstrel.
—Then I will give you the serving creature Shakesp.

I to the vulgar am become a jest;
Esteemed as a minstrel at a feast. Sandys's Paraph.

These fellows
Were once the minstrels of a country show,
Follow'd the prizes through each paltry town,
By trumpet-cheeks and bloated faces known Dryden.

Often our seers and poets have confess'd,
That musick's force can tame the furious beast,
Can make the wolf, or foaming boar restrain
His rage, the lion drop his crested mane,
Attentive to the song, the lynx forget
His wrath to man, and lick the minstrel's feet. Prior

MI'NSTRELSEY. n. s. [from minstrel.]

1. Musick, instrumental harmony.

Apollo's self will envy at his play,
And all the world applaud his minstrelsey Davies

That loving wretch that swears,
'Tis not the bodies marry, but the minds,
Which he in her angelick finds,
Would swear as justly, that he hears,
In that day's rude hoarse minstrelsey, the spheres Donne

I began,
Wrapt in a pleasing fit of melancholy,
To meditate my rural minstrelsey,
Till fancy had her fill Milton

1. A looking-glass, any thing which exhibits representations of objects by reflection.

And in his waters which your mirror make,
Behold your faces as the crystal bright. Spenser.

That pow'r which gave me eyes the world to view,
To view myself infus'd an inward light,
Whereby my soul, as by a mirror true,
Of her own form may take a perfect sight. Davies

Less bright the moon,
But opposite in level'd West was set
His mirror, with full face borrowing her light
From him. Milton's Parad. Lost.
Mirror of poets, mirror of our age,
Which her whole face beholding on thy stage,
Pleas'd and displeas'd with her own faults, endures
A remedy like those whom musick cures. Waller.
By chance he spy'd a mirror while he spoke,
And gazing there beheld his alter'd look,
Wond'ring, he saw his features and his hue
So much were chang'd, that scarce himself he knew. Dryden.
Late as I rang'd the crystal wilds of air,
In the clear mirror of thy ruling star,
I saw, alas! some dread event impend. Pope.

2. It is used for pattern; for that on which the eye ought to be fixed; as, men look in a glass to adjust their mien or dress: an exemplar; an archetype.

MISCONSTRU'CTION. n. s [mis and construction.] Wrong interpretation of words or things.

It pleas'd the king his master very lately
To strike at me upon his misconstruction,
When he conjunct, and flatt'ring his displeasure,
Tript me behind Shakesp King Lear.

Others conceive the literal acceptation to be a misconstruction of the symbolical expression. Brown

Those words were very weakly inserted where they are so liable to misconstruction. Stilling fleet.

To* MISCO'NSTRUE. v. a. [mis and construe.] To interpret wrong.

That which by right exposition buildeth up Christian faith, being misconstrued breedeth error, between true and false construction the difference reason must shew Hooker

We would have had you heard
The manner and the purpose of his treasons,
That you might well have signified the same
Unto the citizens, who, haply, may
Misconstrue us in him Shakesp Rich III

Many of the unbelieving Israelites would have misconstrued this story of mankind Raleigh.

Do not, great Sir, misconstrue his intent,
Nor call rebellion what was prudent care,
To guard himself by necessary war Dryden.

A virtuous emperor was much afflicted to find his actions misconstrued and defam'd by a party. Addison.

MISCONTI'NUANCE. n. s. [mis and continuance.] Cessation; intermission.

To* MISCO'UNSEL. v. a. [mis and counsel.] To advise wrong.

MI'SCREANT. n. s. [mescreant, Fr.]

1. One that holds a false faith; one who believes in false gods.

Their prophets justly condemned them as an adulterous seed, and a wicked generation of miscreants, which had forsaken the living God Hooker.

2. A vile wretch.

Now, by Apollo, king,
Thou swear'st thy gods in vain
—O vassal! miscreant! Shakesp King Lear

If extraordinary lenity proves ineffectual, those miscreants ought to be made sensible that our constitution is armed with force Addison's Freeholder

MISCREA'TE, } adj. [mis and created]
MISCREA'TED. } Formed unnaturally or illegitimately; made as by a blunder of nature.

Then made he head against his enemies,
And Ymnar slew or Logris miscreate Fairy Queen.

Eftsoons he took that miscreated fair,
And that false other sprite, on whom he spread
A seeming body of the subtile air Spenser

God forbid, my lord,
That you should fashion, wrest, or bow your reading,
With opening titles miscreate, whose right
Suits not in native colours with the truth Shak

MISDE'ED. n. s. [mis and deed] Evil action.

O God,
If thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds,
Yet execute thy wrath on me alone Shakesp
Evils, which our own misdeeds have wrought Milton

Chas'd from a throne, abandon'd, and exil'd
For foul misdeeds were punishments too mild Dryden.

To* MISDE'EM. v. a. [mis and deem.] To judge ill of; to mistake.

All unweeting an enchanter bad
His sense abus'd, and made him to misdeem
My loyalty, not such as it did seem Fairy Queen

Besides, were we unchangeable in will,
And of a wit that nothing could misdeem,
Equal to God, whose wisdom shineth still
And never errs, we might ourselves esteem Davies.

To* MISDEME'AN. v. a. [mis and demean.] To behave ill.

From frailty
And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us,
Have misdemean'd yourself
Shakespeare's Henry VIII

MISDEME'ANOR n. s. [mis and demean.] Offence; ill behaviour; something less than an atrocious crime.

The house of commons have only power to censure the members of their own house, in point of election or misdemeanors, in or towards that house Bacon

It is no real disgrace to the church merely to lose her privileges, but to forfeit them by her fault or misdemeanor South

These could never have touched the head, or stopped the source of these unhappy misdemeanors, for which the punishment was sent. Woodward.

MISDEVO'TION. n. s. [mis and devotion.] Mistaken piety

A place, where misdevotion frames
A thousand prayers to saints, whose very names
The church knew not, heav'n knows not yet. Donne.

A dropsy through his flesh did flow,
Which by misdiet daily greater grew Fairy Queen.

To* MISDISTI'NGUISH. v. a. [mis and distinguish.] To make wrong distinctions.

If we imagine a difference where there is none, because we distinguish where we should not, it may not be denied that we misdistinguish. Hooker

To* MISDO'. v. a. [mis and do.] To do wrong; to commit.

Afford me place to shew what recompence
T'wards thee I intend for what I have misdone Milton.

To* MISDO'. v. n. To commit faults.

Try the erring soul
Not wilfully misdoing, but unaware Misled Milton's Parad. Regained.

I have misdone, and I endure the smart,
Loth to acknowledge, but more loth to part. Dryden.

MISDO'ER. n. s. [from misdo.] An offender, a criminal; a malefactor.

Were they not contained in duty with a fear of law, which inflicteth sharp punishments to misdoers, no man should enjoy any thing Spenser on Ireland.

MISDO'ING. n. s. [from misdo] Offence, deviation from right.

The worst is, to think ourselves safe so long as we keep our injuries from the knowledge of men, and out of our own view, without any awe of that all-seeing eye that observes all our misdoings L'Estrange

To* MISDO'UBT. v. a. [mis and doubt.] To suspect of deceit or danger.

If she only misdoubted me, I were in heaven, for quickly I would bring sufficient assurance Sidney

I do not misdoubt my wife, but I would be loth to turn them both together, a man may be too confident. Shakesp

The bird that hath been limed in a bush,
With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush,
And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird,
Have now the fatal object in my eye,
Where my poor young was limed, was caught, and kill'd, Shakesp. Henry VI

If you misdoubt me that I am not she,
I know not how I shall assure you farther Shak.

To believe his wiles my truth can move,
Is to misdoubt my reason or my love Dryden

MISDO'UBT n. s. [mis and doubt.]

1. Suspicion of crime or danger.

He cannot so precisely weed this land,
As his misdoubts present occasion;
His foes are so enrooted with his friends,
That, plucking to unfix an enemy,
He doth unfasten so and shake a friend. Shakesp.

2. Irresolution, hesitation.

York, steel thy fearful thoughts,
And change misdoubt to resolution. Shakesp.

MISE. n. s. Fr. Issue. Law term. Dict.

Their frugal fathers guns they misemploy,
And turn to pomt and pearl, and ev'ry female toy Dryden

Some taking things upon trust, misemploy their power by lazily enslaving their minds to the dictates of others Locke

That vain and foolish hope, which is misemployed on temporal objects, produces many sorrows. Addison's Spectator

They grew dissolute and prophane: and by misemploying the advantages which God had thrown into their lap, provoked him to withdraw them Atterbury.

MISEMPLO'YMENT. n. s. [mis and employment.] Improper application

An improvident expence, and misemployment of their time and faculties Hale's Origin of Mankind.

MI'SER. n. s. [miser, Lat.]

1. A wretched person; one overwhelmed with calamity.

Do not disdain to carry with you the woful words of a miser now despairing, neither be afraid to appear before her, bearing the base title of the sender Sidney

I wish that it may not prove some ominous foretoken of misfortune to have met with such a miser as I am Sidney

Fair son of Mars, that seek with warlike spoil
And great atchievements, great yourself to make,
Vouchsafe to stay your steed for humble miser's sake Spenser.

2. A wretch, a mean fellow

Decrepit miser! base ignoble wretch!
I am descended of a gentler blood. Shakesp

3 A wretch covetous to extremity; one who in wealth makes himself miserable by the fear of poverty. This is the only sense now in use

Though she be dearer to my soul than rest
To weary pilgrims, or to misers gold,
Rather than wrong Castalio I'd forget her Otway

No silver saints by dying misers giv'n,
Here brib'd the rage of ill-requited heav'n,
But such plain roofs as piety could raise,
And only vocal with the Maker's praise Pope

MI'SERABLE. adj [miserable, Fr miser, Lat]

1 Unhappy, calamitous, wretched

O nation miserable,
With an untitled tyrant, bloody scepter'd!
When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again? Shakespeare

Most miserable is the desire that's glorious Shakesp

What's more miserable than discontent? Shakesp

There will be a future state and then how miserable is the voluptuous unbeliever left in the lurch Smith

What hopes delude thee, miserable man? Dryd

MI'SERABLY adv. [from miserable.]

1 Unhappily, calamitously.

Of the five employed by him, two of them quarrelled, one of which was slain, and the other hanged for it, the third drowned himself, the fourth, though rich, came to beg his bread, and the fifth was miserably stabbed to death South

2 Wretchedly; meanly

As the love I bear you makes me thus invite you, so the same love makes me ashamed to bring you to a place where you shall be so, not spoken by ceremony but by truth, miserably entertained Sidney.

3. Covetously. Ainsworth.

MI'SERY. n. s [miseria, Lat misere, Fr.]

1. Wretchedness; unhappiness.

My heart is drown'd with grief,
My body round engirt with misery Shakesp

Happiness, in its full extent, is the utmost pleasure we are capable of, and misery the utmost pain Locke

Perhaps it may be found more easy to forget the language than to part entirely with those tempers which we learnt in misery Law

2. Calamity; misfortune; cause of misery.

When we our betters see bearing our woes,
We scarcely think our miseries our foes Shakesp

The gods from heav'n survey the fatal strife,
And mourn the miseries of human life. Dryden.

3. [From miser.] Covetousness; avarice Not in use. Miser now signifies not an unhappy but a covetous man; yet misery now signifies not covetousness but unhappiness

He look'd upon things precious, as they were
The common muck o' th' world he covets less
Than misery itself would give Shakesp Coriolanus.

In a fabrick of forty thousand pounds charge, I wish thirty pounds laid out before in an exact model, for a little misery may easily breed some absurdity of greater charge Wotton.

MISESTE'EM. n. s. [mis and esteem.] Disregard; slight.

To MISFA'SHION. v. a. [mis and fashion.] To form wrong.

A thing in reason impossible, through their misfashioned preconceit, appeared unto them no less certain, than if nature had written it in the very foreheads of all the creatures of God Hakewill

To MISFO'RM. v a. [mis and form.] To put in an ill form

His monstrous scalp down to his teeth it tore,
And that misformed shape misshaped more Spenser

Fortune thus 'gan say, misery and misfortune is all one,
And of misfortune, fortune hath only the gift Sidney

What world's delight, or joy of living speech,
Can heart so plung'd in sea of sorrows deep,
And heaped with so huge misfortunes reach? Spenser

Consider why the change was wrought,
You'll find it his misfortune, not his fault Addison.

To MISGI'VE v. a. [mis and give.] To fill with doubt, to deprive of confidence. It is used always with the reciprocal pronoun.

As Henry's late presaging prophesy
Did glad my heart with hope of this young Richmond,
So doth my heart misgive me in these conflicts
What may befall him, to his harm or ours Shak

This is strange! Who hath got the right Anne?
My heart misgives me Shakesp Merry Wives of Windsor.

Yet oft his heart divine of something ill,
Misgave him. Milton

His heart misgave him, that these were so many meeting-houses, but, upon communicating his suspicions, I soon made him easy Addison's Freeholder

MISGI'VING. n. s. [from misgive.] Doubt; distrust.

If a conscience thus qualified and informed, be not the measure by which a man may take a true estimate of his absolution, the sinner is left in the plunge of infinite doubts, suspicions, and misgivings, both as to the measures of his present duty, and the final issues of his future reward. South.

To MISGO'VERN. v. a [mis and govern.] To govern ill; to administer unfaithfully.

Soliman charged him bitterly, that he had misgoverned the state, and inverted his treasures to his own use Knolles

1. Ill administration of publick affairs.

Men lay the blame of those evils whereof they know not the ground, upon public misgovernment. Raleigh's Essays.

2. Ill management.

Men are miserable, if their education hath been so undisciplined, as to leave them unfurnished of skill to spend their time, but most miserable, if such misgovernment and unskilfulness make them fall into vicious company Taylor

3. Irregularity; inordinate behaviour.

There is not chastity enough in language,
Without offence, to utter them thus, pretty lady,
I am sorry for thy much misgovernment Shakesp

MISGUI'DANCE. n s. [mis and guidance.] False direction.

The Nicene council fixed the equinox the twenty-first of March for the finding out of Easter which has caused the misguidance from the sun which we he under in respect of Easter, and the moveable feasts. Holder on Time.

Whosoever deceives a man makes him ruin himself, and by causing an error in the great guide of his actions, his judgment, he causes an error in his choice, the misguidance of which must naturally engage him to his destruction. South.

To MISGUI'DE v. a. [mis and guide.] To direct ill; to lead the wrong way.

Hunting after arguments to make good one side of a question, and wholly to neglect those which favour the other, is wilfully to misguide the understanding, and is so far from giving truth its due value, that it wholly debases it. Locke

Misguided prince! no longer urge thy fate,
Nor tempt the hero to unequal war. Prior

Of all the causes which conspire to blind
Man's erring judgment, and misguide the mind,
What the weak head with strongest bias rules
Is pride, the never-failing vice of fools. Pope.

MISHA'P n. s [mis and hap.] Ill chance; ill luck; calamity

To tell you what miserable mishaps fell to the young prince of Macedon his cousin, I should too much fill your ears with strange horrours Sidney

Since we are thus far entered into the consideration of her mishaps, tell me, have there been any more such tempests wherein she hath thus wretchedly been wrecked? Spenser

Sir knight, take to you wonted strength,
And master these mishaps with patient might. Spenser

Rome's readiest champions, repose you here,
Secure from worldly chances and mishaps. Shakes

It cannot be
But that success attends him, if mishap,
Ere this he had return'd, with fury driv'n
By his avengers, since no place like this
Can fit his punishment, or your revenge Milton

If the worst of all mishaps hath fallen
Speak, for he could not die unlike himself Denh.

MI'SHMASH. n. s. Ainsworth. A low word. A mingle or hotch potch.

To MISINFE'R. v. a. [mis and infer.] To infer wrong.

Nestorius teaching rightly, that God and man are distinct natures, did thereupon misinfer, that in Christ those natures can by no conjunction make one person Hooker

To MISINFO'RM. v. a. [mis and inform.] To deceive by false accounts.

Some belonged to a man of great dignity, and not as that wicked Simon had misinformed
2 Mac iii 11

By no means trust to your servants, who mislead you, or misinform you, the reproach will lie upon yourself. Bacon.

Bid her well beware,
Lest by some fair appearing good surpris'd,
She dictate false, and misinform the will
To do what God expressly hath forbid. Milton

MISINFORMA'TION. n. s. [from misinform.] False intelligence; false accounts.

Let not such be discouraged as deserve well, by misinformation of others, perhaps out of envy or treachery, Bacon

The vengeance of God, and the indignation of men, will join forces against an insulting baseness, when backed with greatness, and set on by misinformation. South's Sermons.

To* MISINTE'RPRET. v. a. [mis and interpret.] To explain to a wrong sense, or wrong intention.

The gentle reader rests happy to hear the worthiest works misinterpreted, the clearest actions obscured, and the innocentest life traduced Ben Jonson

After all the care I have taken, there may be several passages misquoted and misinterpreted Arbuthnot on Coins

To* MISJOIN. v. a. [mis and join.] To join unfitly or improperly.

In reason's absence mimick fancy wakes
To imitate her, but misjoining shapes,
Wild work produces oft and most in dreams,
Ill-matching words, and deeds, long past, or late Milton

Luther, more mistaking what he read,
Misjoins the sacred body with the bread Dryden.

To* MISJU'DGE. v. n. [mis and judge.] To form false opinions, to judge ill.

You misjudge,
You see through love, and that deludes your sight,
As, what is straight, seems crooked through the water. Dryden

By allowing himself in what is innocent, he breeds offence to his weak and misjudging neighbour. Atterbury

Insensate!
Too long misjudging have I thought thee wise,
But sure relentless folly steels thy breast Pope

To* MISJU'DGE. v. a. To mistake; to judge ill of

Where we misjudge the matter, a miscarriage draws pity after it, but when we are transported by pride, our ruin lies at our own door L'Estrange

To* MISLA'Y. v. a. [mis and lay] To lay in a wrong place.

Mean time my worthy wife our arms mislay'd,
And from beneath my head my sword convey'd Dryden

The fault is generally mislaid upon nature, and there is often a complaint of want of parts, when the fault lies in want of a due improvement Locke

If the butler be the tell-tale, mislay a spoon, so as he may never find it Swift's Rules to Servants

MISLA'YER n. s. [from mislay] One that puts in the wrong place.

The mislayer of a mere stone is to blame but the unjust judge is the capital remover of landmarks, when he defineth amiss of lands Bacon

To* MISLE'AD. v. a. preterite and part. pass. misled. [mis and lead.] To guide a wrong way; to betray to mischief or mistake.

Take, oh take those lips away,
That so sweetly were forsworn;
And those eyes, the break of day,
Lights that do mislead the morn Shakesp

Poor misled men! your states are yet worthy pity
If you would hear, and change your savage minds,
Leave to be mad. Ben Jonson's Catiline

Trust not servants who mislead or misinform you Bacon

O thievish night,
Why should'st thou but for some felonious end,
In thy dark lanthorn thus close up the stars,
That nature hung in heav'n, and fill'd their lamps
With everlasting oil, to give due light
To the misled and lonely traveller? Milton

What can they teach and not mislead
Ignorant of themselves, of God much more? Milton

Thou who hast taught me to forgive the ill,
And recompense, as friends, the good misled,
If mercy be a precept of thy will,
Return that mercy on thy servant's head. Dryden.

The imagination, which is of simple perception, doth never of itself, and directly mislead us, yet it is the almost fatal means of our deception Glanville's Scepsis

Whatever necessity determines to the pursuit of real bliss, the same necessity establishes suspence, and scrutiny of each successive desire, whether the satisfaction of it does not interfere with our true happiness, and mislead us from it Locke

'Tis hard to say, if greater want of skill
Appear in writing or in judging ill
But of the two, less dang'rous is th' offence
To tire our patience, than mislead our sense Pope

MISLE'ADER n. s. [from mislead.] One that leads to ill.

When thou dost hear I am as I have been,
Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast,
The tutor and the feeder of my riots,
Till then I banish thee on pain of death,
As I have done the rest of my misleaders Shakesp

They have disclaimed and abandoned those heretical phantasies touching our Saviour, wherein by their misleaders they had been anciently plunged Brerewood on Languages

MIST. n. s. [mipt, Sax]

1 A low thin cloud, a small thin rain not perceived in single drops.

Old Chaucer, like the morning star,
To us discovers day from far,
His light those mists and clouds dissolv'd
Which our dark nation long involv'd Denham

And mists condens'd to clouds obscure the sky,
And clouds dissolv'd the thirsty ground supply
Roscommon

As a mist is a multitude of small but solid globules, which therefore descend, so a vapour, and therefore a watery cloud, is nothing else but a congeries of very small and concave globules, which therefore ascend to that height, in which they are of equal weight with the air, where they remain suspended, till by some motion in the air, being broken, they descend in solid drops, either small, as in a mist, or bigger, when many of them run together, as in rain Grew

But hov'ring mists around his brows are spread
And night with sable shades involves his head
Dryden

A cloud is nothing but a mist flying high in the air, as a mist is nothing but a cloud here below
Locke

MONOSY'LLABLE. n. s. [monosyllabe, Fr. μόνος and συλλαβή] A word of only one syllable.

My name of Ptolemy!
It is so long it asks an hour to write it
I'll change it into Jove or Mars!
Or any other civil monosyllable,
That will not tire my hand Dryden's Cleomenes.

Poets, although not insensible how much our language was already overstocked with monosyllables, yet, to save time and pains, introduced that barbarous custom of abbreviating words, to fit them to the measure of their verses Swift

Monosyllable lines, unless artfully managed, are stiff or languishing, but may be beautiful to express melancholy. Pope

MONOSY'LLABLED. adjective. [monosyllabe, Fr. from monosyllable.] Consisting of one syllable.

Nine taylors, if rightly spell'd,
Into one man are monosyllabled Cleaveland

MONO'TONY n. s [μονοτονία; μόνος and τόνος; monotonie, Fr] Uniformity of sound, want of variety in cadence

I could object to the repetition of the same rhymes within four lines of each other as tiresome to the ear through their monotony Pope's Letters

MONSIEUR. n. s [Fr.] A term of reproach for a Frenchman.

A Frenchman his companion,
An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much loves
A Gallian girl Shakesp Cymbeline

MONSO'ON n. s. [monson, monçon, Fr]

Monsoons are shifting trade winds in the East Indian ocean, which blow periodically, some for half a year one way, others but for three months, and then shift and blow for six or three months directly contrary Harris.

The monsoons and trade winds are constant and periodical even to the thirtieth degree of latitude all around the globe, and seldom transgress or fall short of those bounds Ray

MO'NSTER. n. s. [monstre, Fr. monstrum, Lat.]

1. Something out of the common order of nature.

Methinks heroic poesie till now,
Like some fantastic fairy land did shew,
Gods, devils, nymphs, witches, and giants race,
And all but man in man's chief work had place
Then like some worthy knight with sacred arms,
Dost drive the monsters thence, and end the alarms
Cowley.

It ought to be determined whether monsters be really a distinct species, we find, that some of these monstrous productions have none of those qualities that accompany the essence of that species from whence they derive Locke

2. Something horrible for deformity, wickedness, or mischief.

If she live long,
And, in the end, meet the old course of death,
Women will all turn monsters.
Shakesp King Lear

All human virtue to its latest breath,
Finds envy never conquer'd but by death
The great Alcides, ev'ry labour past,
Had still this monster to subdue at last. Pope.

To MO'NSTER. v. a. [from the noun.] To put out of the common order of things. Not in use.

Her offence
Must be of such unnatural degree
That monsters it Shakesp King Lear

I had rather have one scratch my head i' th' sun,
When the alarum were struck, than idly sit
To hear my nothings monster'd
Shakesp Coriolanus.

MONSTRO'SITY. } n. s. [from monMONSTRUO'SITY. } strous.] The state of being monstrous, or out of the common order of the universe. Monstrosity is more analogous.

This is the monstrosity in love, that the will is infinite, and the execution confin'd Shakesp

Such a tacit league is against such routs and shoals of people, as have utterly degenerated from nature, as have in their very body and frame of estate a monstrosity Bacon.

We read of monstrous births, but we often see a greater monstrosity in education thus, when a father has begot a man, he trains him up into a beast. Smith's Sermons

By the same law monstrosity could not incapacitate from marriage, witness the case of hermaphrodites Arbuthnot and Pope

MO'NSTROUS. adj [monstreux, Fr. monstrosus, Lat.]

1. Deviating from the stated order of nature.

Nature there perverse,
Brought forth all monstrous, all prodigious things,
Hydras, and gorgons, and chimeras dire.
Milton

Every thing that exists has its particular constitution, and yet some monstrous productions have few of those qualities which accompany the essence of that species from whence they derive their originals Locke.

2. Strange, wonderful Generally with some degree of dislike.

Is it not monstrous that this player here,
But in a fiction, in a dream of passion,
Could force his soul so to his conceit,
That, from her working, all his visage wan'd?
Shakesp.

O monstrous! but one halfpenny worth of bread to this intolerable deal of sack Shakesp

3. Irregular, enormous

No monstrous height, or breadth, or length appear,
The whole at once is bold and regular Pope

4. Shocking; hateful.

This was an invention given out by the Spaniards to save the monstrous scorn their nation received Bacon

MO'NSTROUS. adv. Exceedingly, very much. A cant term

Oil of vitriol and petroleum, a dram of each, turn into a mouldy substance, there residing a fair cloud in the bottom, and a monstrous thick oil on the top. Bacon

She was easily put off the hooks, and monstrous hard to be pleased again L'Estrange

Add, that the rich have still a gibe in store,
And will be monstrous witty on the poor Dryden

MO'NSTROUSLY. adv. [from monstrous.]

1. In a manner out of the common order of nature; shockingly; terribly; horribly.

Tiberius was bad enough in his youth, but superlatively and monstrously so in his old age South's Sermons

2. To a great or enormous degree.

He walks,
And that self-chain about his neck,
Which he forswore most monstrously to have Shak.
These truths with his example you disprove,
Who with his wife is monstrously in love Dryden

MO'NSTROUSNESS. n. s. [from monstrous.] Enormity; irregular nature or behaviour.

See the monstrousness of man,
When he looks out in an ungrateful shape! Shak

MONTANT. n. s. [Fr.] A term in fencing.

His hat was like a helmet, or Spanish montero Bacon

MONTE'TH. n. s. [from the name of the inventor.] A vessel in which glasses are washed.

New things produce new words, and thus Monteth
Has by one vessel sav'd his name from death King

MONTH. n. s [monaδ, Sax.] A space of time either measured by the sun or moon: the lunar month is the time between the change and change, or the time in which the moon comes to the same point: the solar month is the time in which the sun passes through a sign of the zodiack the calendar months, by which we reckon time, are unequally of thirty or one-and-thirty days, except February, which is of twenty-eight, and in leap year of twenty-nine

Till the extirpation of your month,
Sojourn with my sister Shakesp King Lear
From a month old even unto five years old
Lev. xxvii. 6

Months are not only lunary, and measured by the moon, but also solary, and terminated by the motion of the sun, in thirty degrees of the ecliptick Brown's Vulg. Err

As many months as I sustain'd her hate,
So many years is she condemn'd by fate
To daily death Dryden's Theo. and Honoria

MONTH'S mind n. s. Longing desire.

You have a month's mind to them Shakesp
For if a trumpet sound, or drum beat,
Who has not a month's mind to combat? Hudibras.

MO'NTHLY adj [from month.]

1 Continuing a month, performed in a month

I would ask concerning the monthly revolutions of the moon about the earth, or the diurnal ones of the earth upon its own axis, whether these have been finite or infinite Bentley

2. Happening every month.

The youth of heav'nly birth I view'd,
For whom our monthly victims are renew'd Dryd

MO'NTHLY adv. Once in a month

If the one may very well monthly, the other may as well even daily, be iterated Hooker
O swear not by the moon, th' inconstant moon,
That changes monthly in her circled orb,
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable Shakesp

In his time there remained the monument of his tomb in the mountain Jasius. Raleigh.
He is become a notable monument of unprosperous disloyalty. King Charles
So many grateful altars I would rear
Of grassy turf, and pile up every stone
Of lustre from the brook, in memory,
Or monument to ages and thereon
Offer sweet-smelling gums. Milton's Par. Lost
Of ancient British art
A pleasing monument, not less admir'd
Than what from Attick or Etruscan hands
Arose Philips.
Collect the best monuments of our friends, their own images in their writings. Pope to Swift

2. A tomb; a cenotaph; something erected in memory of the dead.

On your family's old monument
Hang mournful epitaphs, and do all rites
That appertain unto a burial Shakesp
The flowers which in the circling valley grow,
Shall on his monument their odours throw Sandys
In a heap of slain,
Two youthful knights they found beneath a load oppress
Of slaughter'd foes, whom first to death they sent,
The trophies of their strength, a bloody monument Dryden
With thee on Raphael's monument I mourn,
Or wait inspiring dreams at Maro's urn Pope

MONUME'NTAL. adj [from monument]

1 Memorial; preserving memory.

When the sun begins to fling
His flaring beams, me, goddess, bring
To arched walks of twilight groves,
And shadows brown that Sylvan loves,
Of pine or monumental oak Milton
The destruction of the earth was the most monumental proof that could have been given to all the succeeding ages of mankind Woodward
The polish'd pillar different sculptures grace,
A work outlasting monumental brass Pope

2. Raised in honour of the dead, belonging to a tomb

Perseverance keeps honour bright
To have done, is to hang quite out of fashion
Like rusty mail in monumental mockery Shakesp
I'll not wear that whiter skin of hers than snow,
And smooth as monumental alabaster Shakesp
Therefore if he needs must go,
And the fates will have it so,
Softly may he be possest
Of his monumental rest Crashaw

MOOD. n. s. [mode, Fr modus, Lat.]

1 The form of an argument.

For cutting corns, or letting blood Hudibras.
These two kids, t'appease his angry mood,
I bear, of which the furies give him good Dryden
He now profuse of tears,
In suppliant mood fell prostrate at our feet. Addison.

5. Anger, rage, heat of mind. Mod, in Gothick, signifies habitual temper.

That which we move for our better instruction's sake, turneth into anger and choler in them, yet in their mood they cast forth somewhat wherewith, under pain of greater displeasure, we must rest contented Hooker.

MO'ODY. adj. [from mood.]

1. Angry; out of humour.

How now, moody?
What is't thou can'st demand? Shakesp. Tempest
Chide him rev'rently,
When you perceive his blood incline to mirth,
But being moody, give him line and scope,
Till that his passions, like a whale on ground,
Confound themselves with working. Shakesp
Ev'ry peevish, moody malecontent
Shall set the senseless rabble in an uproar. Rowe

2. Mental, intellectual mob in Saxon signifies the mind.

MO'RAL. adj. [moral, Fr. moralis, Lat.]

1. Relating to the practice of men towards each other, as it may be virtuous or criminal; good or bad.

Keep at the least within the compass of moral actions, which have in them vice or virtue. Hooker

Laws and ordinances positive he distinguisheth from the laws of the two tables, which were moral Hooker

In moral actions divine law helpeth exceedingly the law of reason to guide life, but in supernatural it alone guideth Hooker

Now, brandish'd weapons glitt'ring in their hands,
Mankind is broken loose from moral bands,
No rights of hospitality remain,
The guest, by him who harbour'd him, is slain
Dryden

2. Reasoning or instructing with regard to vice and virtue.

France spreads his banners in our noiseless land,
With plumed helm thy slay'r begins his threats,
Whilst thou, a moral fool, sit'st still and criest
Shakesp

3. Popular; customary, such as is known or admitted in the general business of life

Physical and mathematical certainty may be stiled infallible, and moral certainty may properly be stiled indubitable Wilkins

We have found, with a moral certainty, the seat of the Mosaical abyss Burnet's Theory of the Earth

Mathematical things are capable of the strictest demonstration, conclusions in natural philosophy are capable of proof by an induction of experiments, things of a moral nature by moral arguments, and matters of fact by credible testimony Tillotson

A moral universality, is when the predicate agrees to the greatest part of the particulars which are contained under the universal subject Watts.

MO'RAL. n. s.

1 Morality; practice or doctrine of the duties of life, this is rather a French than English sense.

Their moral and œconomy,
Most perfectly they made agree Prior

MO'RALIZER n. s. [from moralize.] He who moralizes.

MO'RALLY adv. [from moral]

1. In the ethical sense

By good, good morally so called, bonum honestum, ought chiefly to be understood, and that the good of profit or pleasure, the bonum utile or jucundum, hardly come into any account here South

Because this, of the two brothers killing each other, is an action morally unnatural, therefore, by way of preparation, the tragedy would have begun with heaven and earth in disorder, something physically unnatural Rymer

2 According to the rules of virtue.

To take away rewards and punishments, is only pleasing to a man who resolves not to live morally Dryden

3 Popularly; according to the common occurrences of life, according to the common judgment made of things.

It is morally impossible for an hypocrite to keep himself long upon his guard L'Estrange

I am from the nature of the things themselves morally certain, and cannot make any doubt of it, but that a mind free from passion and prejudice is more fit to pass a true judgment than such a one as is byassed by affections and interests Wilkins

The concurring accounts of many such witnesses render it morally, or, as we might speak, absolutely impossible that these things should be false Atterbury's Sermons.

MO'RALS. n s [without a singular.] The practice of the duties of life; behaviour with respect to others.

Some, as corrupt in their morals as vice could make them, have yet been solicitous to have their children soberly, virtuously, and piously brought up South's Sermons

Learn then what morals critics ought to shew
'Tis not enough wit, art, and learning join,
In all you speak, let truth and candour shine Pope.

The Lord did that thing on the morrow Exod ix 6

Peace, good reader, do not weep,
Peace, the lovers are asleep,
Let them sleep, let them sleep on,
Till this stormy night be gone,
And the eternal morrow dawn,
Then the curtains will be drawn,
And they waken with the light,
Whose day shall never sleep in night Crashaw

To morrow you will live, you always cry,
In what far country doth this morrow lie?
That 'tis so mighty long ere it arrive
Beyond the Indies does this morrow live?
'Tis so far-fetch'd this morrow, that I fear
'Twill be both very old, and very dear,
To morrow will I live, the fool does say,
To day itself's too late, the wise liv'd yesterday Cowley

2. To morrow. [This is an idiom of the same kind, supposing morrow to mean originally morning. as, to night, to day.] On the day after this current day.

To morrow comes, 'tis noon, 'tis night
This day like all the former flies,
Yet on he runs to seek delight
To morrow, till to night he dies Prior

3. To morrow is sometimes, I think improperly, used as a noun.

Our yesterday's to morrow now is gone,
And still a new to morrow does come on
We by to morrows draw out all our store,
Till the exhausted well can yield no more Cowley.

To morrow is the time when all is to be rectified. Spectator.

MORSE. n s [phoca] A sea-horse.

In the battle of Landen you were not only dangerously, but, in all appearance, mortally wounded Dryden

2. Extremely, to extremity. A low ludicrous word

Adrian mortally envied poets, painters, and artificers, in works wherein he had a vein to excel Bacon's Essays

Know all, who won'd pretend to my good grace,
I mortally dislike a damning face. Granville

MO'RTAR. n. s. [mortarium, Lat. mortier, Fr.]

1 A strong vessel in which materials are broken by being pounded with a pestle.

Except you could bray Christendom in a mortar, and mould it into a new paste, there is no possibility of an holy war Bacon.

The action of the diaphragm and muscles serves for the comminution of the meat in the stomach by their constant agitation upwards and downwards, resembling the pounding of materials in a mortar Ray on the Creation.

2. A short wide cannon out of which bombs are thrown.

Those arms which for nine centuries had brav'd
The wrath of time on antique stone engrav'd,
Now torn by mortars stand yet undefac'd
On nobler trophies by thy valour rais'd Granville.

MO'RTAR. n s. [morter, Dut. mortier, Fr.] Cement made of lime and sand with water, and used to join stones or bricks.

Mortar, in architecture, is a preparation of lime and sand mixed up with water, serving as a cement, and used by masons and bricklayers in building of walls of stone and brick Wolfius observes, that the sand should be dry and sharp, so as to prick the hands when rubbed, yet not earthy, so as to foul the water it is washed in he also finds fault with masons and bricklayers as committing a great error, in letting their lime slacken and cool before they make up their mortar, and also in letting their mortar cool and die before they use it, therefore he advises, that if you expect your work to be well done, and to continue long, to work up the lime quick, and but a little at a time, that the mortar may not lie long before it be used

I will tread this unbolted villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a jakes with him Shakesp K Lear

They had brick for stone, and slime for mortar Gen xi 3

Lime hot out of the kiln mixed soft with water, putting sand to it, will make better mortar than other Mortimer

MU'MMY. n. s. [mumie, Fr. mumia, Lat. derived by Salmasius from amomum, by Bochart from the Arabick.]
1. A dead body preserved by the Egyptian art of embalming.
We have two substances for medicinal use under the name of mummy one is the dried flesh of human bodies embalmed with myrrh and spice, the other is the liquor running from such mummies when newly prepared, or when affected by great heat, or by damps, this is sometimes of a liquid, sometimes of a solid form, as it is preserved in vials, or suffered to dry the first kind is brought in large pieces, of a friable texture, light and spungy, of a blackish brown colour, and often black and clammy on the surface; it is of a strong but not agreeable smell the second, in its liquid state, is a thick, opake, and viscous fluid, of a blackish and a strong, but not disagreeable smell in its indurated state it is a dry, solid substance, of a fine shining black colour and close texture, easily broken, and of a good smell this sort is extremely dear, and the first sort so cheap, that we are not to imagine it to be the ancient Egyptian mummy. What our druggists are supplied with is the flesh of any bodies the Jews can get, who fill them with the common bitumen so plentiful in that part of the world, and adding aloes, and some other cheap ingredients, send them to be baked in an oven till the juices are exhaled, and the embalming matter has penetrated. Hill's Mat Med.

Was dy'd in mummy, which the skilful
Conserv'd of maidens' hearts. Shakesp Othello.

Nature and nature's laws lay hid in night,
God said, let Newton be, and all was light. Pope.

13. Of this word which occurs so frequently, with significations so various, and so difficultly defined, Boyle has given an explication, which deserves to be epitomised.

Nature sometimes means the Author of Nature, or natura naturans, as, nature hath made man partly corporeal and partly immaterial For nature in this sense may be used the word creator

Nature sometimes means that on whose account a thing is what it is, and is called, as when we define the nature of an angle For nature in this sense may be used essence or quality

Nature sometimes means what belongs to a living creature as its nativity, or accrues to it by its birth, at when we say, a man is noble by nature, or a child is naturally forward This may be expressed by saying, the man was born so; or, the thing was generated such.

Nature sometimes means an internal principle of local motion, as we say, the stone falls, or the flame rises by nature, for this we may say, that the motion up or down is spontaneous, or produced by its proper cause

Nature sometimes means the established course of things corporeal, as, nature makes the night succeed the day. This may be termed established order or settled course.

Nature means sometimes the aggregate of the powers belonging to a body, especially a living one, as when physicians say, that nature is strong, or nature left to herself will do the cure. For this may be used, constitution, temperament, or structure of the body

Nature is put likewise for the system of the corporeal works of God, as there is no phœnix or chimera in nature For nature thus applied, we may use the world, or the universe.

Nature is sometimes indeed commonly taken for a kind of semi-deity In this sense it is best not to use it at all
Boyle's Free Inquiry into the received Notion of Nature.

NATU'RITY. n. s. [from nature.] The state of being produced by nature. A word not used.

This cannot be allowed, except we impute that unto the first cause which we impose not on the second, or what we deny unto nature we impute unto naturity Brown

NA'VAL. adj. [naval, Fr. navalis, Lat.]

No man shall take the nether or the upper millstone to pledge, for he taketh a man's life to pledge Deuteronomy, xxiv 6.

In his picture are two principal errors, the one in the complexion and hair, the other in the mouth, which commonly they draw with a full and nether great lip. Peacham.

This odious offspring,
Thine own begotten, breaking violent way
Tore through my entrails, that with fear and pain
Distorted, all my nether shape thus grew Transform'd. Milton's Par. Lost.

The upper part whereof was whey,
The nether, orange mix'd with grey. Hudibras.

A beauteous maid above, but magic arts,
With barking dogs deform'd her nether parts.
Roscommon.

As if great Atlas from his height
Shou'd sink beneath his heav'nly weight,
And with a mighty flaw, the flaming wall
Shou'd gape immense, and rushing down, o'erwhelm this nether ball. Dryden.

Two poles turn round the globe,
The first sublime in heaven, the last is whirl'd
Below the regions of the nether world Dryden

2. Being in a lower place.

This shews you are above,
You justices, that these our nether crimes,
So speedily can venge. Shakesp. King Lear

Numberless were those bad angels, seen
Hov'ring on wing under the cope of hell,
'Twixt upper, nether, and surrounding fires. Milt

3. Infernal; belonging to the regions below.

No less desire
To found this nether empire, which might rise,
In emulation, opposite to heav'n. Milton.

The gods with hate beheld the nether sky,
The ghosts repine. Dryden's Æneid

NE'THERMOST. adj. [superl. of nether.] Lowest.

Great is thy mercy toward me, and thou hast delivered my soul from the nethermost hell Psalms

Undaunted to meet there whatever pow'r,
Or spirit, of the nethermost abyss
Might in that noise reside Milton's Paradise Lost

All that can be said of a liar lodged in the very nethermost hell, is this, that if the vengeance of God could prepare any place worse than hell for sinners, hell itself would be too good for him South.

Heraclitus tells us, that the eclipse of the sun was after the manner of a boat, when the concave, as to our sight, appears uppermost, and the convex nethermost. Keil against Burnet

NE'TTING. n. s. A reticulated piece of work.

NETTLE. n. s [netel, Sax.] A stinging herb well known.

The strawberry grows underneath the nettle
Shakesp.

Some so like to thorns and nettles live,
That none for them can, when they perish grieve
Waller

To NE'TTLE. v. a. [from the noun] To sting, to irritate, to provoke.

The princes were so nettled at the scandal of this affront, that every man took it to himself L'Estr

Although at every part of the Apostles discourse some of them might be uneasy and nettled, yet a moderate silence and attention was still observed Bentley

NE'TWORK. n. s. [net and work.] Any thing reticulated or decussated, at equal distances, with interstices between the intersections.

Nor any skill'd in workmanship emboss'd,
Nor any skill'd in loops of fing'ring fine,
Might in their diverse cunning ever dare,
With this so curious network to compare Spenser

A large cavity in the sinciput was filled with ribbons, lace, and embroidery, wrought together in a curious piece of network Addison

Whoever contemplates with becoming attention this curious and wonderful net-work of veins, must be transported with admiration Blackmore

NE'VER. adv. [ne ever, næfre, Sax. ne æfre not ever.]

1. At no time.

Never, alas, the dreadful name
That fuels the infernal flame Cowley

Never any thing was so unbred as that odious man. Congreve

By its own force destroy'd, fruition ceas'd,
And always weary'd, I was never pleas'd Prior

Death still draws nearer, never seeming near Pope

2. It is used in a form of speech handed down by the best writers, but lately accused, I think, with justice, of solecism as, he is mistaken though never so wise. It is now maintained, that propriety requires it to be expressed thus, he is mistaken though ever so wise; that is he is mistaken how wise soever he be. The common mode can only be defended by supplying a very harsh and unprecedented ellipsis, he is mistaken though so wise, as never was any: such however is the common use of the word amongst the best authors.

Be it never so true which we teach the world to believe, yet if once their affections begin to be alienated, a small thing persuadeth them to change their opinions Hooker

Ask me never so much dowry and gift, and I will give according as ye shall say Genesis.

In a living creature, though never so great, the sense and the effects of any one part of the body, instantly make a transcursion throughout the whole body. Bacon

They destroyed all, were it never so pleasant, within a mile of the town. Knolles

Death may be sudden to him, though it comes by never so slow degrees Duty of Man.

He that shuts his eyes against a small light, would not be brought to see that which he had no mind to see, let it be placed in never so clear a light, and never so near him. Atterbury

That prince whom you espouse, although never so vigorously, is the principal in war, you but a second Swift

3. In no degree.

Whosoever has a friend to guide him, may carry his eyes in another man's head, and yet see never the worse. South.

4. It seems in some phrases to have the sense of an adjective. Not any; but in reality it is not ever.

He answered him to never a word, insomuch that the governour marvelled Matthew, xxvii 14.

5. It is much used in composition: as, never-ending, having no end; of which some examples are subjoined.

Nature assureth us by never-failing experience, and reason by infallible demonstration, that our times upon the earth have neither certainty nor durability Raleigh

But a smooth and stedfast mind,
Gentle thoughts and calm desires,
Hearts with equal love combin'd,
Kindle never-dying fires Carew

Ye myrtles brown, with ivy never scar,
I come to pluck your berries harsh and crude.
Milton

Your never-failing sword made war to cease,
And now you heal us with the acts of peace
Waller

So corn in fields, and in the garden flow'rs,
Revive and raise themselves with mod'rate show'rs,
But over-charg'd with never-ceasing rain,
Become too moist Waller

Our heroes of the former days,
Deserv'd and gain'd their never-fading bays.
Roscommon

Not Thracian Orpheus should transcend my lays,
Nor Linus crown'd with never-fading bays Dryd

Leucippus, with his never-erring dart Dryden
Farewell, ye never-opening gates Dryden

He to quench his drought so much inclin'd,
May snowy fields and nitrous pastures find,
Meet stores of cold so greedily pursu'd,
And be refresh'd with never-wasting food Blackm.

Norton hung down his never-blushing head,
And all was hush'd, as folly's self lay dead Pope.

What the weak head with strongest bias, rules,
Is pride, the never-failing vice of fools. Pope

Thy busy never-meaning face,
Thy screw'd up front, thy state grimace. Swift

NEVERTHELE'SS. adv. [never the less.] Notwithstanding that.

They plead that even such ceremonies of the church of Rome as contain in them nothing which is not of itself agreeable to the word of God, ought nevertheless to be abolished. Hooker.

Many of our men were gone to land, and our ships ready to depart; nevertheless the admiral, with such ships only as could suddenly be put in readiness, made forth towards them. Bacon.

Creation must needs infer providence; and God's making the world, irrefragably proves that he governs it too, or that a being of a dependent nature remains nevertheless independent upon him in that respect. South

NEU'ROLOGY. n. s. [νευρον and λογος.] A description of the nerves.

NEU'ROTOMY. n. s. [νευρον and τεμνω.] The anatomy of the nerves.

NEU'TER. adj. [neuter, Lat. neutre, Fr.]

1. Indifferent; not engaged on either side.

The general division of the British nation is into whigs and tories, there being very few, if any, who stand neuter in the dispute, without ranging themselves under one of these denominations Addison's Freeholder

2. [In grammar.] A noun that implies no sex.

The adjectives are neuter, and animal must be understood to make it grammar. Dryden

A verb neuter is that which signifies neither action nor passion, but some state or condition of being, as, sedeo, I sit Clark.

NEU'TER. n. s. One indifferent and unengaged.

The learned heathens may be looked upon as neuters in the matter, when all these prophecies were new to them, and their education had left the interpretation of them indifferent Addison.

NEU'TRAL adj. [neutral, Fr.]

1 Indifferent; not acting; not engaged on either side.

Who can be wise, amaz'd, temp'rate and furious,
Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man
Shakesp

He no sooner heard that king Henry was settled by his victory, but forthwith he sent ambassadors unto him, to pray that he would stand neutral Bacon's Henry VII

The allies may be supplied for money, from Denmark and other neutral states Addison on the War.

2. Indifferent; neither good nor bad.

Some things good, and somethings ill do seem,
And neutral some, in her fantastick eye Davies

3. Neither acid nor alkaline.

Salts which are neither acid nor alkaline, are called neutral Arbuthnot

NEU'TRAL. n. s. One who does not act nor engage on either side.

The treacherous who have misled others, and the neutrals and the false-hearted friends and followers, who have started aside like a broken bow, are to be noted. Bacon

NEUTRA'LITY. n. s. [neutralité, Fr.]

1. A state of indifference; of neither friendship nor hostility.

Men who possess a state of neutrality in times of publick danger, desert the interest of their fellow-subjects. Addison.

The king, late griefs revolving in his mind,
These reasons for neutrality assign'd Garth's Ovid

All pretences to neutrality are justly exploded, only intending the safety and ease of a few individuals, while the publick is embroiled. This was the opinion and practice of the latter Cato Swift

2. A state between good and evil

There is no health physicians say, that we
At best enjoy but a neutrality Donne

NEU'TRALLY. adv. [from neutral.] Indifferently, on either part.

NEW. adj. [newyd, Welsh; neop, Sax. neuf, Fr.]

1. Not old; fresh; lately produced, made, or had; novel. New is used of things, and young of persons.

What's the newest grief?
—That of an hour's age doth hiss the speaker;
Each minute teems a new one Shakesp. Macbeth.

2. Not being before.

Do not all men complain how little we know, and how much is still unknown? And can we ever know more, unless something new be discovered? Burnet.

3. Modern; of the present time.

Whoever converses much among old books, will be something hard to please among new Temple

4. Different from the former.

Steadfastly purposing to lead a new life Common Prayer

5. Not antiquated; having the effect of novelty.

There names inscrib'd unnumber'd ages past,
From time's first birth, with time itself shall last,
These ever new, nor subject to decays,
Spread and grow brighter with the length of days
Pope

6. Not habituated; not familiar.

Such assemblies, though had for religion's sake, may serve the turn of hereticks, and such as privily will instil their poison into new minds Hooker

Seiz'd with wonder and delight,
Gaz'd all around me, new to the transporting sight
Dryden.

Twelve mules, a strong laborious race,
New to the plough, unpractis'd in the trace. Pope

8. Fresh after any thing.

Nor dare we trust so soft a messenger,
New from her sickness to that northern air Dryd

9. Not of ancient extraction.

A superior capacity for business, and a more extensive knowledge, are steps by which a new man often mounts to favour, and outshines the rest of his contemporaries Addison

NEW. adv. This is, I think, only used in composition for newly, which the following examples may explain.

As soon as she had written them, a new swarm of thoughts stinging her mind, she was ready with her foot to give the new-born letters both to death and burial Sidney

God hath not then left this to chuse that, neither would reject that to chuse this, were it not for some new-grown occasion, making that which hath been better worse Hooker

So dreadfully he towards him did pass,
Forelifting up aloft his speckled breast,
And often bounding on the bruised grass,
As for great joyance of his new-come guest
Spenser

Your master's lines
Are full of new-found oaths, which he will break
As easily as I do tear this paper. Shakesp.

Will you with those infirmities she owes,
Unfriended, new-adopted to our hate,
Dower'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our oath,
Take her or leave her? Shakesp King Lear

Lest by a multitude
The new-heal'd wound of malice should break out.
Shakesp

Now hath my soul brought forth her prodigy,
And I a gasping, new-delivered mother,
Have woe to woe, sorrow to sorrow join'd.
Shakesp

He saw heav'n blossom with a new-born light,
On which, as on a glorious stranger gaz'd
The golden eyes of night, whose beams made bright
The way to Beth'lem, and as boldly blaz'd;
Nor ask'd leave of the sun, by day as night.
Crashaw

I've seen the morning's lovely ray
Hover o'er the new-born day,
With rosy wings so richly bright,
As if she scorn'd to think of night,
When a ruddy storm, whose scoul
Made heaven's radiant face look foul,
Call'd for an untimely night
To blot the newly blossom'd light. Crashaw

Some tree, whose broad smooth leaves together sow'd,
And girded on our loins, may cover round
Those middle parts, that this new-comer shame,
There sit not, and reproach us as unclean. Milton.

Their father's state,
And new-entrusted sceptre. Milton

The new-created world, which fame in heav'n
Long had foretold. Milton's Par. Lost

His evil
Thou usest, and from thence createst more good,
Witness this new-made world, another heav'n Milton.

All clad in liveliest colours, fresh and fair
As the bright flowers that crown'd their brighter hair,
All in that new-blown age which does inspire
Warmth in themselves, in their beholders fire. Cowley

If it could, yet that it should always run them into such a machine as is already extant, and not often into some new-fashioned one, such as was never seen before, no reason can be assigned or imagined Ray on the Creation.

This English edition is not so properly a translation, as a new composition, there being several additional chapters in it, and several new-moulded Burnet's Theory

New-found lands accrue to the prince whose subject makes the first discovery Burnet's Theory

Let this be nature's frailty, or her fate,
Or Isgrim's counsel, her new-chosen mate Dryden.

Shewn all at once you dazzled so our eyes,
As new-born Pallas did the gods surprise,
When springing forth from Jove's new-closing wound,
She struck the warlike spear into the ground Dryden

A bird new-made, about the banks she plies,
Not far from shore, and short excursions tries Dryden.

Our house has sent to day
T' insure our new-built vessel, call'd a play Dryden.

Then curds and cream,
And new-laid eggs, which Baucis' busy care
Turn'd by a gentle fire, and roasted rare Dryden

When pleading Matho, borne abroad for air,
With his fat paunch fills his new-fashioned chair Dryden.

A new-form'd faction does your power oppose,
The fight's confus'd, and all who met were foes Dryden

If thou ken'st from far
Among the Pleiads a new-kindled star,
If any sparkles from the rest more bright,
'Tis she that shines in that propitious light Dryden.

If we consider new-born children, we shall have little reason to think that they bring many ideas into the world with them Locke

Drummers with vellum-thunder shake the pile,
To greet the new-made bride Gay's Trivia

Ah Blouselind! I love thee more by half,
Than does their fawns, or cows the new-fallen calf Gay

This is the state of man to-day he puts forth
The tender leaves of hope, to-morrow blossoms,
And bears his blushing honours thick upon him
The third day comes a frost, a killing frost,
And when he thinks, good easy man, full surely
His greatness is a-ripening, nips his root,
And then he falls, as I do Shakesp Henry VIII.
A flower doth spread and dye,
Thou would'st extend me to some good,
Before I were by frost's extremity nipt in the bud Herb
His delivery now proves
Abortive, as the first-born bloom of spring,
Nipt with the lagging rear of winter's frost Milton
Had he not been nipped in the bud, he might have made a formidable figure in his own works among posterity Addison
From such encouragement it is easy to guess to what perfection I might have brought this work, had it not been nipt in the bud Arbuth J. Bull.

4. To pinch as frost

The air bites shrewdly, it is very cold.
—It is a nipping and an eager air Shakesp. Hamlet.

NI'TID. adj. [nitidus, Lat.] Bright; shining; lustrous.

We restore old pieces of dirty gold to a clean and nitid yellow, by putting them into fire and aqua fortis, which take off the adventitious filth Boyle on Colours

NI'TRE. n. s. [nitre, Fr. nitrum, Lat.]

The salt which we know at this time, under the name of nitre or salt-petre, is a crystalline pellucid, but somewhat whitish substance, of an acid and bitterish taste, impressing a peculiar sense of coldness upon the tongue. This salt, though it affords, by means of fire, an acid spirit capable of dissolving almost every thing, yet manifests no sign of its containing any acid at all in its crude state Nitre is of the number of those salts which are naturally blended in imperceptible particles in earth, stones, and other fossil substances, as the particles of metals are in their ores It is sometimes however found pure, in form of an efflorescence, either on its ores or on the surface of old walls, these efflorescences dissolved in proper water, shooting into regular and proper crystals of nitre. The earth from which nitre is made, both in Persia and the East-Indies, is a kind of yellowish marl found in the bare cliffs of the sides of hills exposed to the northern and eastern winds, and never in any other situation The natrum or nitre of the ancients, is a genuine, native, and pure salt, extremely different from our nitre, and from all other native salts, being a fixed alkali plainly of the nature of those made by fire from vegetables, yet being capable of a regular crystallization, which those salts are not It is found on or very near the surface of the earth, in thin flat cakes, spungy, light, and friable, and when pure, of a pale brownish white colour In scripture we find that the salt called nitre would ferment with vinegar, and had an abstersive quality, properties which perfectly agree with this salt, but not with salt-petre, as do many different qualities ascribed to it by the ancients. Hill on Fossils.

Some tumultuous cloud,
Instinct with fire and nitre, hurried him Milton.

Some steep their seed, and some in cauldrons boil,
With vigorous nitre and with lees of oil Dryden.

NI'TROUS. adj. [nitreux, Fr. from nitre.] Impregnated with nitre, consisting of nitre.

Earth and water, mingled by the heat of the sun, gather nitrous fatness more than either of them have severally. Bacon.

The northern air being more fully charged with those particles supposed nitrous, which are the aliment of fire, is fittest to maintain the vital heat in that activity which is sufficient to move such an unwieldy bulk with due celerity Ray

He to quench his drought so much inclin'd,
May snowy fields and nitrous pastures find
Meet stores of cold so greedily pursu'd,
And be refresh'd with never-wasting food Blackm

NI'TRY. adj. [from nitre.] Nitrous.

Winter my theme confines; whose nitry wind
Shall crust the slabby mire, and kennels bind Gay.

No wit to flatter left of all his store,
No fool to laugh at, which he valued more. Pope.

No weeping orphan saw his father's stores
Our shrines irradiate, or imblaze the floors. Pope.

Our bard
No common object to your sight displays. Pope

Poor Edwin was no vulgar boy Beattie.

2. It seems an adjective in these phrases, no longer, no more, no where; though sometimes it may be so commodiously changed to not, that it seems an adverb: as, the days are yet no shorter.

When we saw that they were no where, we came to Samuel 1 Samuel, x. 14

In vain I reach my feeble hands to join
In sweet embraces, ah! no longer thine Dryden

3. No one; none; not any one.

No one who doeth good to those only from whom he expects to receive good, can ever be fully satisfied of his own sincerity Smalridge.

Tending all to nymphish war. Drayton.

NYS. [A corruption of ne is.] None is; not is. Obsolete]

Thou findest fault, where nys to be found,
And buildest strong work upon a weak ground. Spenser.

O.

O HAS in English a long sound; as, drone, groan, stone, alone, cloke, broke, coal, droll; or short, got, knot, shot, prong, long. It is usually denoted long by a servile a subjoined; as, moan, or by e at the end of the syllable; as, bone: when these vowels are not appended, it is generally short, except before ll; as, droll, scroll, and even then sometimes short, as, loll.

1. O is used as an interjection of wishing or exclamation.

O that we, who have resisted all the designs of his love, would now try to defeat that of his anger! Decay of Piety

O! were he present, that his eyes and hands
Might see, and urge the death which he commands Dryden

2. O is used with no great elegance by Shakespeare for a circle or oval.

Can this cockpit hold
The vasty field of France? or may we cram
Within this wooden O, the very casks
That did affright the air at Agincourt Shakesp

OAF. n. s. [This word is variously written; auff, ofe, and oph; it seems a corruption of ouph a demon or fairy; in German alf, from which elf: and means properly the same with changeling; a foolish child left by malevolent ouphs or fairies, in the place of one more witty, which they steal away.]

1. A changeling; a foolish child left by the fairies.

These, when a child haps to be got,
Which after proves an idiot,
When folk perceives it thriveth not,
The fault therein to smother
Some silly doating brainless calf,
That understands things by the half,
Says that the fairy left this oaf,
And took away the other Drayton's Nymphid.

2. A dolt; a blockhead; an idiot.

OA'FISH. adj. [from oaf] Stupid; dull; doltish.

OA'FISHNESS. n. s. [from oafish] Stupidity, dullness.

OAK. n. s [ac, sec, Sax. which, says Skinner, to shew how easy it is to play the fool, under a shew of literature and deep researches, I will, for the diversion of my reader, derive from δῶ a house; the oak being the best timber for building Skinner seems to have had Junius in his thoughts, who on this very word has shewn his usual fondness for Greek etymology, by a derivation more ridiculous than that by which Skinner has ridiculed him. Ac or oak, says the grave critick, signified among the Saxons, like robur among the Latins, not only an oak but strength, and may be well enough derived, non incommode deduci potest, from δλκη strength, by taking the three first letters, and then sinking the λ, as is not uncommon, quercus]

The oak-tree hath male flowers, or katkins, which consist of a great number of small slender threads The embryos, which are produced at remote distances from these on the same tree, do afterwards become acorns, which are produced in hard scaly cups the leaves are sinuated. The species are five Miller

He return'd with his brows bound with oak Shakesp

He lay along
Under an oak, whose antique root peeps out
Upon the brook that brawls along this wood Shak.

No tree beareth so many bastard fruits as the oak for besides the acorns, it beareth galls, oak apples, oak nuts, which are inflammable, and oak berries, sticking close to the body of the tree without stalk Bacon's Natural History

The monarch oak, the patriarch of the trees,
Shoots rising up, and spreads by slow degrees
Three centuries he grows, and three he stays
Supreme in state, and in three more decays. Dryden.

An oak growing from a plant to a great tree, and then lopped, is still the same oak. Locke

A light earthy, stony, and sparry matter incrusted and affixed to oak leaves Woodw. on Foss.

Let India boast her plants, nor envy we
The weeping amber and the balmy tree,
While by our oaks the precious loads are born,
And realms commanded which those trees adorn. Pope

OAK Evergreen. n. s. [ilex.]

The fruit is an acorn like the common oak. The wood of this tree is accounted very good for many sorts of tools and utensils, and affords the most durable charcoal in the world Miller

He snatched a good tough oaken cudgel, and began to brandish it. Arbuthnot's John Bull.

OA'KENPIN. n. s. An apple.

Oakenpin, so called from its hardness, is a lasting fruit, yields excellent liquor, and is near the nature of the Westbury apple, though not in form. Mortim r.

OA'KUM. n. s. [A word probably formed by some corruption] Cords untwisted and reduced to hemp, with which, mingled with pitch, leaks are stopped.

They make their oakum, wherewith they calk the seams of the ships of old seer and weather-beaten ropes, when they are over spent and grown so rotten as they serve for no other use but to make rotten oakum, which moulders and washes away with every sea as the ships labour and are tossed Raleigh.

Some drive old oakum thro' each seam and rift,
Their left hand does the calking-iron guide,
The rattling mallet with the right they lift Dryd.

OAR. n. s. [ar, Sax. perhaps by allusion to the common expression of plowing the water, from the same root with ear to plow; aro, Lat] A longpole with a broad end, by which vessels are driven in the water, the resistance made by water to the oar pushing on the vessel.

Th' oars were silver,
Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made
The water which they beat, to follow faster,
As amorous of their strokes. Shak. Ant. and Cleop.

So tow'rds a ship the oar-finn'd gallies ply,
Which wanting sea to ride, or wind to fly,
Stands but to fall reveng'd Denham's Poems.

In shipping such as this, the Irish kern
And untaught Indian, on the stream did glide,
E'er sharp-keel'd boats to stem the flood did learn,
Or fin-like oars did spread from either side. Dryd.

Its progressive motion may be effected by the help of several oars, which in the outward ends of them shall be like the fins of a fish to contract and dilate. Wilkins.

And merry larks are ploughmens clocks. Shakesp

OATH. n. s. [aith, Goth. aδ, Sax. The distance between the noun oath, and the verb swear, is very observable as it may shew that our oldest dialect is formed from different languages.] An affirmation, negation, or promise, corroborated by the attestation of the Divine Being.

Read over Julia's heart, thy first best love,
For whose dear sake thou then did'st rend thy faith
Into a thousand oaths, and all those oaths
Descended into perjury to love me Shakesp
All the oath-rites said,
I then ascended her adorned bed Chapman
We have consultations, which inventions shall be published, which not and take an oath of secrecy for the concealing of those which we think fit to keep secret. Bacon
